LEGISLATION
Final Report 11/13

FEBRUARY 2013

Preface

This Final Report is based on issues raised during the Commission's public consultations in February 2010 and the 2011 Child Protection Baseline Research "Baseline Research"<sup>1</sup>. The Baseline Research was carried out by the Ministry of Women Community and Social Development "MWCSD" in collaboration with the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund "UNICEF". The Law Reform Commission (Commission) verified the legislative review findings of the Baseline Research.

The Baseline Research used 251 child protection indicators (Indicators) deduced from the Convention on the Rights of a Child (CRC)<sup>2</sup>. These Indicators were used to measure how far Sāmoa has complied with its obligations under CRC. These indicators were also used in similar work in Fiji, Kiribati, Solomon Islands and Vanuatu. The findings of baseline research in these respective countries have initiated reforms in the area of child protection<sup>3</sup>.

Baseline research uses indicators to determine the extent of compliance with approved standards<sup>4</sup>. The results and findings from a baseline research inform policy makers, lawmakers and service providers of appropriate approaches to adopt to ensure that standards and goals are achieved. Appropriate approaches include policy development, legislative enactment, reforms of existing policies and laws and provision of necessary services where none have been offered before or the improvement of existing services. Baseline researches are therefore an integral part of a results-based accountability system<sup>5</sup>.

The National Council for the Convention on the Rights of a Child "NCCRC"<sup>6</sup> and the Convention on the Rights of a Child Partnership "CRCP"<sup>7</sup> have endorsed the Baseline Research findings<sup>8</sup>.

The Commission therefore is relying on the Baseline Research findings to guide its work on this Report. The time frame for this work is set out under the Government of Samoa/UNICEF Pacific Annual Work Plan 2012.

The Commission also recently received a reference from the Attorney General to assess the appropriateness of establishing a Sex Offenders Register for Samoa. Whilst there are overlaps between the present reference and the reference on Sex Offenders Register, the Commission believes that the scope of the new reference is not limited to child protection alone but affects other members of the community. The Commission is therefore addressing Sex Offenders Registry as a separate Reference<sup>9</sup>.

1. Introduction

- 1.1 Samoa ratified the Convention on the Rights of a Child (CRC) on the 29 November 1994 with one reservation<sup>14</sup>. In ratifying CRC, Samoa has a legal duty to comply with its legal obligations under the Convention<sup>15</sup>. This means that Samoa has to align its policies and laws with the objectives of the CRC which prioritise the care and protection of children.
- 1.2 In November 2008, one of the first references the Samoa Law Reform Commission received from Cabinet when it was established was the Care and Protection (Protection of Children) project “Project”. The Project commenced in February 2009 as an in-house Project focussing on: (i) identifying legislation dealing with the care and protection of children in Samoa and (ii) extent of Samoa’s compliance with obligations under CRC.
- 1.3 The Commission produced an Issues Paper in December 2009 (IP 03/09). Relevant public consultations were undertaken in Upolu and Savaii in February 2010. Given the number of legislation affected and the increasing national interest in CRC, the Commission resolved to produce a series of Issues Papers rather than proceeding immediately to develop a Final Report.
- 1.4 The preliminary public consultations for this Project linked the Commission to MWCSO through the assistance of its Internal Affairs Division with the Commission’s public consultations and the work done by its Division for Women on CRC. The collaboration with the MWCSO through NCCRC and CRCP catapulted this Project into a Major Law Reform Project. The Commission was asked to verify the findings under Output 1.1<sup>16</sup> of the Baseline Research. Output 1.1 dealt with the review of domestic legislation against CRC indicators to determine the extent of compliance with CRC objectives. The Commission was also asked to assist with the writing and editing of Samoa’s Second Periodic Report on the Implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child (Draft Report). These efforts and other NCCRC and CRCP child protection initiatives such as public awareness programmes and radio talk back shows, directs the Commission’s work in this project.
- 1.5 Upon finalising the Baseline Research, the Commission was of the view that this was sufficient to develop its Final Report. Therefore it proceeded to produce this Report.

<sup>14</sup> Samoa ratified the convention on the rights of the child with one reservation which is stated as follows: The Government of Western Samoa whilst recognizing the importance of providing free primary education as specified under article 28 (1)(a) of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and being mindful of the fact that the greater portion on schools within Western Samoa that provide primary education are controlled by bodies outside the control of the government. Pursuant then to article 51, the Government of Western Samoa thus reserves the right to allocate resources to the primary level sector of education in Western Samoa in contrast to the requirement of article 28 (1)(a) to provide free primary education. (United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child; Multilateral Treaties deposited with the Secretary-General, Status as at 31 December 1994, United Nations, New York, p. 198.(www.icrc.org))

<sup>15</sup> These legal obligations under the CRC are underpinned both in the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and the Pacific Plan’s Strategic Objectives. This is important as Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) will only be sustainable if States human rights obligations are respected and strengthened in the strategies to achieve those goals (Ratification of International Human Rights Treaties: Added Value for the Pacific Region, United Nations Office of the Human Rights Commissioner For Human Rights (OHCHR)-Regional Office for the Pacific (July 2009).

1.6 The indicators used in the Baseline Research to review existing domestic legislation are classified under a number of categories as follows:

- Child Welfare/Child protection system;
- Family separation and alternative care;
- Violence against children;
- Sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children;
- Abduction, sale and trafficking;
- Child labour and children in the streets situations;
- Child friendly investigative and court processes;
- Rehabilitation;
- Children in Conflict with the Law;
- Refugee Accompanied Migrant Children;
- Children in Armed Conflict;
- Information access; and
- Birth Registration.

1.7 This Report will examine the Baseline Research findings and make relevant recommendations for law reform to improve child care and protection in Samoa. This Report will only examine and make recommendations on categories that the Commission believes are relevant to Samoa and require immediate attention.

The role of child care and protection laws

1.8 Childhood is a period of innocence, defencelessness and susceptibility during which a child needs protection<sup>17</sup>. The child by reason of his or her physical and mental immaturity needs special safeguards and care including appropriate legal protection before as well as after birth<sup>18</sup>. Children therefore require special treatment<sup>19</sup>.

1.9 Children who grow up in adverse environments are prone to having short life spans and poor physical and mental health. They are susceptible to social and educational problems and poor parental skills later in life. They are likely to become homeless and displaced and are often exposed to problems such as trafficking and prostitution<sup>20</sup>.

1.10 Child Care and Protection laws provide a safe environment for children to live in harmoniously and develop their personalities<sup>21</sup>. The statistics from Ministry of Police and Prisons<sup>22</sup> and Ministry of Health<sup>23</sup> reveal the need for Samoa to strengthen its legislative frameworks for the care and protection of children.

A need for change

1.11 There are currently more than fifty separate pieces of legislation in Samoa that operate independently to provide some protection for children<sup>24</sup>. Despite this number of legislation, many problems continue to affect the lives of children. The Baseline Research reveals that these problems are due to weak legislative protection and/or poor enforcement. Samoa still has a fair way to go in addressing its obligations under CRC.

1.12 The Baseline Research revealed that out of 251 CRC indicators, Sāmoa has only fully complied with 46 (18.3%); Partial compliance 84 (33.5%); and Non-compliance 121 (48.2%)<sup>25</sup>.

1.13 The lack of full compliance with CRC objectives has prompted judicial intervention in cases affecting children. The Courts have applied the principles of CRC to cases within their scope. In Attorney General v. Maumasi<sup>26</sup>, the Court of Appeal increased the respondent's earlier imprisonment sentence from three and a half years to five years after considering relevant articles of CRC. Judicial activism is however just a provisional remedy limited by the fact that Judiciary's primary role is to interpret and apply the law.

1.14 The appropriate approach is for CRC objectives to be fully and properly incorporated or translated into domestic legislation. This however must be done in light of the local context, to ensure that subsequent reforms are workable. Thus there is a need for appropriate legislative reform to improve child care and protection in Sāmoa.

Focus of recommendations for reform

1.15 The Commission's recommendations for reform are made with a view of addressing Samoa's obligations under CRC and keeping in mind that<sup>27</sup>:

- all children have a right to grow up in an environment free from neglect and abuse;
- children's best interests are paramount in all decisions affecting them;
- children and their families have a right to participate in decisions affecting them;

<sup>27</sup> Convention on the Rights of a Child, Preamble.

- improving the safety and wellbeing of children is a national priority;
- the safety and wellbeing of children is primarily the responsibility of their families, who should be supported by their communities and governments;
- the community values, supports and works in partnership with parents, families and others in fulfilling their caring responsibilities for children;
- children’s rights are upheld by systems and institutions;
- laws of Samoa are kept in a modern state which meets the needs of Government;
- community social, cultural, economic and commercial development of Samoa is enhanced; and
- reforms should be placed in the context of Samoan customs and traditions.

1.16 It is important to note that due to the complexity and sensitivity of some reforms, a progressive approach must be adopted to ensure that people affected fully understand the extent and necessity of recommended changes.

2. A Consolidated Child Care and Protection Legislation

2.1 A legislative review conducted during the Baseline Research revealed that the problems affecting child care and protection of children today are due to inadequate legislative protection and poor enforcement of existing legislation arising from the confusion and impracticality of having too many separate legislation.

Commission’s views

2.2 The enactment of a new child care and protection legislation will be practical. It will facilitate CRC compliance and make future child related law reform easy. It will also render ongoing child care and protection efforts expedient and less antagonising.

2.3 The new child care and protection legislation will ensure that children live in safe and supportive families and communities; children and families access adequate support to promote safety and early intervention; risk factors for child abuse and neglect are addressed; children who have been abused or neglected receive the support and care they need for their safety and wellbeing; child sexual abuse and exploitation is prevented and survivors receive adequate support<sup>28</sup>.

Recommendation 1: A new principal legislation (Child care and protection legislation) should be drafted to replace the Infants Ordinance and consolidate all appropriate child care and protection provisions currently accommodated in different pieces of specific legislation. The new principal legislation should address the issues raised in the Baseline Research. It should also accommodate the proposed child care and protection framework.

All consequential amendments to be made in specific legislation listed in Footnote 17 of this Report should be undertaken by the Drafting Division of the Attorney Generals Office during its annual legislative revision and consolidation programme.

3. Cultural factors which impact child care and protection

- 3.1 Samoa has a unique hierarchical society in which many traditional values and customs remain robust. One such traditional value is the perception of children as precious and a blessing from God. This is reflected in the Samoan saying “O au o matua fanau”. This is with the view that children are the future custodians of family lands and assets. They guarantee the continuation of the family lineage<sup>29</sup>.
- 3.2 Parents and relatives are therefore often very protective over their children<sup>30</sup>. There is a general responsibility amongst members of the extended family: grandparents, uncles, aunties, older cousins and other relatives to care for a child even in the event of family (nuclear family) breakdown<sup>31</sup>.
- 3.3 It is important to note that central to the Samoan culture and society, is the dignity and achievement of the community rather than the individual<sup>32</sup>. This is often viewed by CRC advocates as conflicting with the human rights approach, which places prominence on the dignity and achievements of an individual rather than a community<sup>33</sup>. The Courts in numerous constitutional cases have clarified the priority of human rights over cultural practises<sup>34</sup>.
- 3.4 Equally important in the Samoan culture and society is the accepted use of physical discipline to chastise children and point them in the right path<sup>35</sup>. The use of physical discipline is another point of variance between Samoan culture and CRC principles. The CRC provides that a child should be protected from all forms of physical or mental violence, injury or abuse, neglect or negligent treatment, maltreatment or exploitation, including sexual abuse, while in the care of parent(s), legal guardian(s) or any other person who has the care of the child<sup>36</sup>. The deaths of a number of children during the administration of corporal punishment by their parents or teachers, has placed this practice under a lot of criticism<sup>37</sup>. There are three known cases of parents convicted of manslaughter as a result of being carried away in the course of physically disciplining their children.
- 3.5 In Police v Maumasi (2/11/98) an unreported case, the accused father was sentenced to three and a half years imprisonment resulting from the death of his eight year old stepson upon whom he inflicted a severe beating with a rubber hose. On appeal, the sentence was increased to a five year imprisonment term.
- 3.6 In Police v Taimi Peleuaga (1999) an unreported case, a seven year old girl died as a result of being struck with a wooden tong (iofi) and slapped twice by her father causing her to fall and strike her head against the cement floor. On a guilty plea the accused was sentenced to 4 years imprisonment.

- 3.7 In Police v Tutogi 15/2/07 an unreported case, a thirty two year old mother pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years for swinging a stick at her twelve year old son who was running away to avoid being beaten. As a result of injury to the back of his head the son fell to the ground and died soon after.

Commission's views

- 3.8 Corporal punishment is part of the Samoan culture and has been an effective means of discipline at home and at school in the local context<sup>38</sup>. Children's lives however have been lost during the administration of corporal punishment both in schools and in homes. The Commission also believes that numerous children continue to suffer severe injuries from the administration of corporal punishment. Since there is no mandatory obligation on health professionals and officers such as educators to report such cases to authorities, this issue of children suffering injuries from the unreasonable administration of corporal punishment by parents, teachers and guardians is not effectively addressed. It is only when it has resulted in the death of a child that the criminal law reacts to punish the parent, teacher or guardian.
- 3.9 The Commission acknowledges the difficulty in legislating corporal punishment in a proactive manner to protect the lives of children and control corporal punishment in homes. The CRC promotes the prohibition of corporal punishment in all contexts. The Commission believes this to be a proactive means of preventing injuries and deaths from corporal punishment. But considering that corporal punishment is an integral part of the Samoan culture, an immediate prohibition will criminalise many Samoan parents and guardians. The fact that many Samoans will be affected by such prohibition will render such enactment unworkable and unenforceable, in which case it will do more harm than good.
- 3.10 The prohibition of corporal punishment, will also create a fear of being prosecuted in parents causing them to be reluctant to take their children to the doctor for treatment (if their children are suffering injuries from the administration of corporal punishment) in case the doctor or nurse will report them to the police.
- 3.11 An immediate move to prohibit corporal punishment in homes in Samoa will also create further opposition to the work on the care and protection of children given the misconception many Samoans now have of the concept of rights of a child.
- 3.12 The Commission therefore believes that the best way forward in addressing corporal punishment in homes is through awareness programmes and training at the village level, focussing on the effects of the practice and providing alternative methods of discipline, before legislating against it.
- 3.13 In schools, the Commission believes that the Education Act 2009 sufficiently addresses corporal punishment in public schools at the compulsory education age by completely prohibiting it. The Commission however is concerned that private schools are not covered under the Act. This leaves children in private schools vulnerable. Furthermore, the onus should not be placed on schools to develop and provide a discipline policy as required under the Act<sup>39</sup>. The Ministry of Education Sports and Culture should develop a national discipline policy within the National Education Policy applicable to all schools in Samoa regardless of whether they are private or public.

Recommendation 2: Corporal punishment in homes should be addressed through awareness programmes and trainings by the MWCS and its partners, at the village level, focussing on the effects of corporal punishment on the development of children. These trainings should also provide alternative methods of discipline. This should be done before Samoa legislates against corporal punishment in homes.

Recommendation 3: The Ministry of Education, Sports and Culture should explore the option of including private schools under the scope of the Education Act 2009.

Recommendation 4: The Ministry of Education Sports and Culture must develop a national discipline policy applicable to all private and public schools in Samoa.

3.14 As children grow older, their parents' expectations of them grow dramatically as well. These expectations can be demanding and challenging by the time children reach puberty<sup>40</sup>. Societal demands arising from cultural and church obligations often trigger such expectations. These expose children to serious harm as they are habitually left to be supervised by older siblings or relatives while parents or guardians attend to such demands.

3.15 Numerous incest incidents and indecent assaults on young children occur during this time of absence by parents or guardians. The perpetrator of such harm is usually the step-father, biological father, the father figure or a close male relative or male friend of the family<sup>41</sup>.

3.16 The Commission questions whether there is a link between these social issues and suicide cases in Samoa. A report by the Ministry of Health on Suicide Attempts, Outcomes, Suicide Deaths, between 1999 and 2008 reveals that the number of attempted suicide cases (an average of 33 suicide attempts per year) and deaths (an average of 16 deaths per year) is still very high<sup>42</sup>. It is unclear from the report what percentage of these cases were children. This is something that the Ministry of Health and Sāmoa Bureau of Statistics could address by recording and reporting disaggregated data in relation to suicide cases of children.

3.17 The statistics from the Police Domestic Violence Unit reveal that 29 percent of 551 sexual offences<sup>43</sup> from November 2003 to May 2010, involved victims or survivors who

Recommendation 5: This issue of long absence of parents from homes, frequency of such absence and the link to cases of incest and sexual assault on children should be emphasised in awareness programmes by the MWCSA and its partners.

4. Limited Translation of CRC principles into Domestic Legislation

4.1 The Constitution is clear that international law is not a source of law for Samoa<sup>46</sup>. Therefore, like most jurisdictions in the Pacific, Samoa adopts the dualist approach when it comes to complying with its obligations under international conventions that it has ratified. This means, that the principles of an international convention that Samoa has ratified, need either to be incorporated through or translated into domestic legislation before such principles can become part of the law of Samoa.

4.1 The Samoan Parliament however, has been very slow in passing relevant legislation to give the principles of CRC the force of law. This has prompted the Courts to delve into international law to assist them with their judgments<sup>47</sup>. The Supreme Court in Wagner v Radke<sup>48</sup> applied the policy and principles of the Hague Convention on International Child Abduction 1980 even though Samoa was not a signatory or a party to the Hague Convention.

4.2 In Attorney General v Maumasi,<sup>49</sup> the Court of Appeal applied the relevant articles of the CRC in its judgment even though they have not been formally adopted through domestic legislation. It decreed that all Samoan Courts should have regard to articles of the Convention but only in cases within its scope<sup>50</sup>. In Leituala v Mauga<sup>51</sup>, the Supreme Court in considering the principles of the CRC and the consequences of the defendants' actions on the lives of the plaintiff's children, imposed punitive damages in addition to the substantial award of damages against the defendants. The reasoning for such a radical approach is clear in Lord Cooke of Thorndon's assertions in Tavita v Minister of Immigration,<sup>52</sup> where he stated that Samoa's ratification of the Convention should not be mere window dressing.

directly applied the principles of the CRC in their decisions without formal adoption through domestic legislation.

5. Definition of “Child”

- 5.1 The definition of child under domestic legislation is inconsistent with that provided under CRC. The CRC defines a “child” as every human being below the age of eighteen (18) years unless under the law applicable to the child, majority is attained earlier<sup>59</sup>.
- 5.2 In Samoa, the Infants Ordinance defines a “child” as any infant under the age of sixteen years<sup>60</sup>. The Ordinance refers to an “infant” as a person under the age of twenty one years<sup>61</sup>. A person under the age of twenty one years is referred to as a “minor” under the Acts Interpretation Act 1974<sup>62</sup>.
- 5.3 The CRC definition of “child” implies that age of majority is eighteen years unless majority is attained earlier under certain circumstances defined by law. A minor may attain majority at an earlier age or said to be emancipated, under certain circumstances such as marriage, labour agreements and in some jurisdictions when a female minor gives birth<sup>63</sup>.
- 5.4 The position in Sāmoa seems to be that a minor can receive emancipation through marriage<sup>64</sup> and employment<sup>65</sup>. The minimum age of marriage for females is sixteen (16) years and a male is eighteen (18) years. A child under the age of fifteen (15) years can be employed in a safe environment, be given light work suited to his or her capacity and be subjected to conditions that may be imposed by the Commissioner of Labour. In the absence of judicial interpretation of such provisions, it is unclear what the precise legal position is in Samoa with regards to circumstances that can cause a minor to attain early emancipation.
- 5.5 The idea of emancipation originated from the civil law world and it is to relieve a minor from parental power and control to allow him/her to live life and make decisions as a person of majority even though he or she has yet to acquire the necessary age of majority<sup>66</sup>.

Recommendation 6: The definition of “child” in all domestic legislation should be made consistent with the definition in the CRC. A child is “every human being below the age of eighteen years unless under the law applicable to the child, majority is attained earlier”.

Recommendation 7: The age of majority should be reduced to eighteen years. This will be consistent with the definition of child in the CRC. It will also be consistent with the definition of adult in section 2 of the Young Offenders Act 2007.

Recommendation 8: All domestic legislation should refrain from using different terms such as infant<sup>67</sup> and young person<sup>68</sup> to refer to different age groups. All legislation should use the term “child” throughout all legislation. These terms however, can still be used if they are properly defined as referring to a child of a certain age group.

Recommendation 9: The minimum age of marriage in Sāmoa should be amended to eighteen years for both males and females. There is no real justification as to why the minimum age of marriage for females should be lower than males. It is discriminatory. It is contrary to Article 15(4) of the Constitution which provides for the equal protection of all persons under the law. Section 9 of the Marriage Ordinance 1961 should be amended to make minimum age of marriage eighteen years (18) for both males and females. Parental consent should be sought for marriages below the age of 18 years and section 10 of the Marriage Ordinance 1961 should be amended accordingly.

Recommendation 10: It should also be clearly expressed in the new Child Care and Protection Legislation that the concept of emancipation does not apply to Samoa. This will ensure that female minors giving birth below the age of eighteen (18) years will still enjoy their rights as a child and not lose them due to child birth.

6. Child Welfare/Services and Child Protection Services

6.1 The Infants Ordinance empowers the Court to commit a child living in a place of ill repute, is a neglected, indigent or delinquent child, is not under proper control or is living in an environment detrimental to his or her physical or moral well being, to the care of a Child Welfare Officer<sup>69</sup>. The Minister of Police is empowered under the Ordinance to appoint a fit and proper person as a Child Welfare Officer on an honorary basis or for remuneration<sup>70</sup>.

6.2 A Child Welfare Officer is given powers and rights as a guardian appointed under the Infants Ordinance to provide for the child under his or her care. It is unclear what powers and rights are available to a guardian under PART I of the Ordinance, hence it is unclear what standard of care should be given to a child under a Child Welfare Officer’s supervision. The Court may make directions regarding the upbringing, education, employment, treatment, control or discipline of such child and for the variation or discharge of any such order which committed the child to the custody of the Child Welfare Officer.

Commission's views

- 6.3 The Ordinance is silent about the provision of shelter and maintenance for the child committed to the care of the Child Welfare Office. Presumably the child lives with the Child Welfare Officer. The Commission proposes that children should no longer be placed under the care of a Child Welfare Officer but placed in a proper social welfare/services system.
- 6.4 However, in a setting where a fully functioning western social welfare/services system for children does not exist, an option for the extended family members to provide care and protection for their kin is a viable one. It would be appropriate however, that before placing a child in such an environment, an initial assessment of the extended family environment must be undertaken to ensure that it is safe and healthy for the child. This can be the new role of the Child Welfare Officer.
- 6.5 Relevant guidelines and standards must therefore be created in order to measure the suitability of the extended family's environment. It is also important to determine at the outset whether choosing this option would be in the best interests of the child. The placement should be closely monitored and evaluated from time to time.
- 6.6 The success of such a placement will depend on the loyalty, faith and love of the family members for their kin. It was revealed in earlier consultations that such an arrangement can place financial burden and other problems on the extended family, particularly if changes need to be made to meet any care and protection standards<sup>71</sup>.
- 6.7 The Government can assist the efforts of the extended family by providing support in terms of free medical and health care (free medicine, counselling and treatments of injuries suffered) and free education (for those who are above the age of compulsory education), uniform, stationary and reasonable transportation costs to and from school. There should be controls put in place to minimise any possible abuses and to ensure that such support ceases when it is no longer needed. This can be the responsibility of the MWCSO.
- 6.8 There should be another option available, in the case that the placement with the extended family fails or is unfavourable at the first instance. It might be necessary to explore the option of working together with Non-Governmental Organisations<sup>72</sup> who are currently offering shelters and care and protection for victims of crimes and see how such efforts may be complemented rather than the Government establishing new shelters. The MWCSO should develop guidelines and standards to be implemented to ensure that such shelters are safe and healthy for children and for children to be closely monitored and evaluated.

Recommendation 11: Children removed from the care of their parents should have the first option of being placed in the care and protection of members of their extended family under the new legal framework.

Recommendation 12: There should be a second option for shelters in the case that the placement with the member(s) of extended family fails or is unfavourable at the first instance. It is recommended that the provision of shelters by Non-Governmental Organisations are explored to determine if they can be utilised and if possible how such efforts can be complemented.

Recommendation 13: Proper guidelines and standards should be created to ensure that any new environment that a child is to be placed in is safe and healthy for the child's physical, mental and spiritual development.

Recommendation 14: The MWCSO should be responsible for carrying out an initial assessment of a relative's home that a child is going to be placed in to identify any necessary improvements to be made to ensure that the new environment is safe and healthy for the child's physical, mental and spiritual development. In the case of emergencies then a child must be placed in a safe place whilst such assessments are being carried out.

Recommendation 15: The Government should determine how it can complement or subsidise both options for shelter. It should also look at how it can assist with the costs of necessary improvements to a relative's home.

6.9 The Baseline Research findings reveal that Samoa has not fully complied with 96% of the CRC indicators for child welfare and child protection services. It stated that despite provisions for child protection objectives under the National Policy for Children (2010-2015) no formal legal framework has been established. Thus it recommended that Samoa needs to implement a framework to specify the rights, powers and responsibilities of Government services, the Courts, traditional authorities, parents and children and all actors involved in providing child welfare and child protection services<sup>73</sup>.

6.10 The ideal framework should<sup>74</sup>:

- have clear procedures and accountabilities for reporting, assessment and intervention in cases of children at risk and children who have experienced violence, abuse, neglect or exploitation;
- require all persons (particularly professionals)<sup>75</sup> to report children (even children suspected or at risk) suffering violence, abuse, neglect or exploitation to relevant authorities and to protect persons who report from any liabilities;
- set out duties and powers of social welfare agencies and others working to prevent child abuse and exploitation;
- have available a variety of supportive and protective measures<sup>76</sup> and relevant procedures and criteria for applying for those interventions to prevent child abuse and exploitation;

<sup>75</sup> Professionals working with children (health professionals, teachers, child care workers, etc) specifically relieved from confidentiality obligations. [This law to be enacted only in the context of a functioning and confidential child protection system]

<sup>76</sup> For example, counselling, financial assistance, income generation support, family supervision orders, respite care, parental education, temporary foster or other alternative care, emergency shelter, education/vocational training assistance etc.

- make available support for children and families at risk;
- have child-friendly reporting and complaints system<sup>77</sup>;
- promote a coordinated and multidisciplinary response to children in need of protection;
- only allow for the separation of a child from his/her family when it is necessary for the best interest of the child and by order of a competent authority<sup>78</sup>;
- clearly define the State's legal obligation to provide alternative care for children without parental care or who cannot in their best interests be permitted to remain in parental care, and the forms of alternative care to be provided<sup>79</sup>;
- put the best interest of the child as the paramount consideration in all decisions affecting the child;
- specify criteria for determining the best interest of a child;
- seek and respect the views of a child in any decision about intervention or support services and to uphold their right to privacy;
- set out minimum standards for professional qualification, training and ethical conduct of social workers and individuals working in institutions caring for children;
- require accreditation of social workers and individuals working in institutions caring for children;
- set minimum standards for the types and quality of support services provided by both government and non-governmental service providers to children in need of protection and their families;
- require accreditation of all institutions providing care and protection to children;
- eliminate any discrimination;
- make available an independent and child-friendly avenue for complaints for children in relation to service providers within the child protection and social welfare framework and expediently consider and resolve such complaints;
- embrace informal customary processes relating to child welfare and protection and set standards to ensure that they are suitable for the caring and protecting of children;
- be prepared to supply care and protection to children during emergency situations (natural and manmade disasters).

Commission's views

6.11 The Commission confirms the Baseline Research findings. Samoa does not have a comprehensive legal framework regulating and coordinating child welfare and child protection services. There is a discreet and fragmented framework established through different pieces of legislation discussed earlier in this Report. This fragmented framework requires a total overhaul to appropriately regulate and coordinate child welfare and child protection services in Samoa.

- 6.12 The establishment of a comprehensive legal framework based on CRC standards which pays due regard to Samoan customs and traditions<sup>80</sup> would properly guide present efforts by Government Ministries such as the Ministry of Justice and Courts Administration (MJCA), Ministry of Police and Prisons (MOPP), Ministry of Women Community and Social Development (MWCSD) and all relevant Non Governmental Organisations<sup>81</sup>. It will prevent unnecessary duplication of services and guarantee the efficient utilization of resources. It will also ensure that child welfare and child protection services offered comply with accepted international standards (but these standards need to be considered in light of the Samoan context<sup>82</sup>) and a great proportion of child welfare and child protection concerns are addressed properly and promptly.
- 6.13 The reporting of cases of children suffering violence, abuse, neglect or exploitation to relevant authorities (including children suspected or at risk) should not be made mandatory but on a voluntary basis. Parents, guardians or teachers will hesitate to bring children to the hospital for the treatment of any injuries if they know that in doing so, they will expose themselves to either a fine of ST$500 or an imprisonment term for up to one year<sup>83</sup>.
- 6.14 There is also a requirement under the CRC for parties to first put in place a functioning and confidential child care and protection framework before considering mandatory reporting. Samoa does not have a functioning and confidential child care and protection framework in place yet. Therefore mandatory reporting should not be part of the proposed framework.

Recommendation 16: A new comprehensive framework must be established to effectively and properly regulate child welfare and child protection services in Samoa through the new Child Care and Protection Legislation based on the CRC standards.

Recommendation 17: The features of the new framework should reflect the concerns identified in the Baseline Research. These concerns should be addressed in light of the local context. (such as Samoan culture and traditions, available resources and the existing framework under the Infants Ordinance)

Recommendation 18: The reporting of cases of children suffering violence, abuse, neglect or exploitation to relevant authorities (including children suspected or at risk) should be made only on a voluntary basis at this stage. Samoa has to put in place a functioning and confidential child care and protection framework first before considering the issue on reporting.

<sup>80</sup> For example, children have their place, role and responsibilities in the structure of the Samoan family depending on their ages/physical capacities. Take note of the current legal status of corporal punishment in homes in Sāmoa. Attempts to control and eliminate corporal punishment should be done through awareness and training programmes.

7. Family Separation and Alternative Care

- 7.1 A child can be separated from his or her family and placed in alternative care under certain circumstances recognised by the law in Samoa. These are: when the institution of family is broken down and the custody and upbringing of a child is awarded to either parent(s) after a divorce proceeding<sup>84</sup>; when the Court places the child under the care of a guardian because the parents are unfit to have the custody and upbringing of such child<sup>85</sup>; when the child has been adopted<sup>86</sup>; when the Court commits a child who has been living in a place of ill repute or is a neglected, indigent or delinquent child, or is not under proper control, or is living in an environment detrimental to its physical or moral well-being to the care of a Child Welfare Officer<sup>87</sup>; when a child who has a mental disorder<sup>88</sup> is placed in a place of care and support and given treatment and protection<sup>89</sup>; when a child's parent(s) is/are convicted of a crime and serving an imprisonment term and the child is placed either with one of the parent(s) or with relatives<sup>90</sup>; abducted<sup>91</sup> or kidnapped<sup>92</sup> or when a parent(s) is banished from the village by the village council<sup>93</sup>.
- 7.2 The Baseline Research found legislation<sup>94</sup> dealing with the separation of a child from his or her family and alternative care to be lacking in clarity<sup>95</sup>. They also provided very limited options for alternative care<sup>96</sup>. The Baseline Report attributed this limitation to the existence of a traditionally strong extended family relationships and their sense of responsibility<sup>97</sup>.
- 7.3 It also pointed out that the law needs to be more explicit in stating the best interests of a child as the primary consideration in all decisions affecting him or her. In determining what the best interests of a child are, his or her views must be heard and taken seriously<sup>98</sup>.

7.4 Overall, the existing laws relating to family separation and alternative care failed to fully comply with 71% of the relevant indicators.

7.5 The Baseline Research pointed out issues that require attention under this category to ensure that they fully comply with relevant indicators under this part. The relevant legislation must:

- clearly define the parent's roles and responsibilities under all circumstances such as after a divorce;
- due regard should be paid to the desirability of continuity in a child's upbringing and to the child's ethnic, religious, cultural and linguistic background;
- the nature of the parents' relationship is explicitly excluded as a consideration in the allocation of parental responsibility when parents separate;
- a child is separated from his or her parents only as a last resort and where it is in the best interests of the child and necessary for his or her protection;
- family preservation is explicitly stated in the relevant law as the priority in arrangements for child protection;
- there are provisions for limitations on the ability of parents to voluntarily give up their parental responsibilities<sup>99</sup>;
- clearly state alternative care options under the proposed child care and protection legislation<sup>100</sup>;
- should specifically provide that cases dealing with the separation of children from their parents must be dealt with confidentially and where court proceedings are involved, in a closed court;
- all children in alternative care are subject to a regular review of that placement;
- there is an independent, child-friendly avenue of complaint for consideration and resolution of complaints by children regarding state actions to separate them from their parents and related issues such as alternative care;
- require that all cases dealing with the separation of children from their parents be dealt with speedily;
- explicitly provide that, when parents separate, the grounds for allocating parental responsibility are based on the individual child's best interests;
- provide a presumption that when parents separate, that it is in the best interests of a child to maintain contact with both parents, unless the contrary is proven;
- explicitly exclude neglect arising from poverty as a grounds for child removal;

- require that priority be given to placement of a separated child with members of his/her wider family, with appropriate support where necessary and explicitly state that institutionalisation is a measure of last resort;
- require that the best interests of the child be the primary consideration in making decisions about alternative care;
- require that the child's views be taken into consideration in any decision made about alternative care, and that those views be given due weight in accordance with the child's age and maturity;
- require that the views of all interested parties be heard and taken into consideration in any decision made in relation to the separation of a child from his or her parents and the allocation of alternative care;
- give children separated from their parents the right to maintain personal relations and direct contact with both parents on a regular basis, except if it is contrary to the child's best interests;
- establish standards of care for residential care facilities and available forms of alternative care and accreditation required;
- require in adoption matters the seeking of a child's consent or views and to consider such consent or views in light the child's age and capacity;
- require that counselling be provided to a child where consent is required under the law;
- put in place border controls to monitor the entry and exit of babies and children travelling with adults who are not their parents;
- require the consideration of the child's right not to be separated from his or her parents unless necessary for his or her best interests in deportation matters<sup>101</sup>;
- permit children to visit their parents serving time in prison;
- recognize the right of a child to know the whereabouts of his or her parents where separation results from action by the State; and
- prohibit traditional customs which separate parents and children unnecessarily.

Commission's views

7.6 The Commission agrees with the Baseline Report findings. However, given the number of legislation that are affected by the Baseline Report findings, it is best that the issues identified for this category be addressed in the principal legislation<sup>102</sup> or in the proposed Child Care and Protection legislation. The consequential amendments can be made through the legislative review process.

7.7 It is important to note that some issues raised in the Baseline Report under this category have been addressed in recent law reform. In some cases they have already form part of existing laws and in others they have formed part of draft legislation awaiting Parliamentary endorsement.

- 7.8 The Baseline Research pointed out the need to have the permission for children to visit their parents in prison to be explicitly provided for in legislation. The Prisons and Correction Bill 2011 clause 42(1)(e) prohibits impermissible penalties which will deny a prisoner from seeing his or her children. However, such right of communication can be withdrawn under relevant Regulations or Commissioner's Orders, under certain circumstances but only for a period of time.
- 7.9 Clause 60(1)(p) of the Bill also allows arrangements for female prisoners and their children consistent with the rights and obligations under CEDAW and CRC in particular the rights of mothers to feed and care for their infant children whilst in prison.
- 7.10 The Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Ordinance 1961 was recently amended to provide that a decree of divorce does not take effect unless the Court has, by order, declared that it is satisfied that proper arrangements in all the circumstances have been made for the care, welfare and development of those children of the marriage under the age of 18 years<sup>103</sup>. Also under these recent amendments, the Attorney General can join divorce and matrimonial proceedings as one of the parties upon the request of the Court to intervene, contest or argue any question in relation to an order relating to the welfare of a child<sup>104</sup>.

Recommendation 19: The issues identified in Baseline Research under the Family Separation and Alternative Care category should be all addressed in the new Child Care and Protection Legislation. The consequential amendments can be made through the legislative review process by the Legal Drafting Division of the Attorney General's Office.

Recommendation 20: In relation to alternative care, the Commission has already made recommendations earlier with regards to using the extended family as an option and the use of existing efforts by non-governmental organisations. Guidance can be sought from the framework provided under the Mental Health Act 2007, where voluntary care and support within family and community is first used before considering the use of a formal institution.

Recommendation 21: The new Care and Protection Legislation should address the issues raised in paragraph 7.5 of this Report.

8. Violence and Maltreatment

- 8.1 Violence and maltreatment of children cut across boundaries of geography, race, class, religion and culture. It happens in homes, schools, on the streets, in places of work and entertainment, and in care and detention centers<sup>105</sup>. Perpetrators include parents, family members, teachers, caretakers, law enforcement authorities and other children<sup>106</sup>. No country is immune, whether rich or poor<sup>107</sup>.
- 8.2 In Samoa, the Constitution provides that no person shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment<sup>108</sup>. The Crimes Ordinance operates to protect the public from such treatment<sup>109</sup>. Neglect<sup>110</sup> is captured under sections 76 and 77 of the Crimes Ordinance<sup>111</sup> which charges a person who neglects to provide necessities of life to a person under his or her charge. Any person that is convicted of failing to provide necessities of life to a person with a disability or a child under the age of 16 years is liable to an imprisonment term of up to 7 years<sup>112</sup>.
- 8.3 It also an offence under the Infants Ordinance to cause a child under the age of 14 years unnecessary suffering, or injury to its health, wilfully ill-treats, neglects, abandons, or exposes such child or causes or procures such child to be ill-treated, neglected, abandoned, or exposed<sup>113</sup>. An exception to this is administering of reasonable punishment by a parent, teacher, or any other person who lawfully has control or charge of such child<sup>114</sup>. A person who is convicted of this offence is liable to a fine not exceeding ST $500 or to an imprisonment term not exceeding five years<sup>115</sup>.
- 8.4 The Education Act 2009 also does not permit the use of: corporal punishment; any form of punishment that may cause harm to the recipient; or any form of punishment that humiliates or is intended to humiliate the recipient; on compulsory school-aged<sup>116</sup> children<sup>117</sup>. The Act does not apply to children above fourteen (14) years of age.
- 8.5 The Baseline Research revealed that Samoa has only fully complied with 6% of the relevant indicators for Violence and Maltreatment<sup>118</sup>. The relevant legislation lacked clear definitions and prohibitions of the different forms of violence<sup>119</sup> against children<sup>120</sup>.

Baseline Research, p. 60.

Physical punishment although prohibited in schools and early childhood education settings, is not prohibited in other settings including the home<sup>121</sup>. The Baseline Research also found that relevant legislation failed to address domestic violence<sup>122</sup>. There is a need to legislate against violence in educational and other institutional settings<sup>123</sup>. It identified the need to provide a child friendly complaints mechanism in order to improve the enforcement of existing child protection provisions<sup>124</sup>.

8.6 It pointed out that relevant legislation needs to address these issues before they can fully comply with the relevant indicators. They need to<sup>125</sup>:

- clearly define and strictly prohibit all forms of violence against children<sup>126</sup>;
- explicitly prohibit corporal punishment in the home, school, institutions and community and remove any legal exceptions or defences under the law to parents or others in relation to assaults on children<sup>127</sup>,
- make it an offence to use threat or mental violence in homes, public and private schools, public and private child care institutions, foster care, alternative care, day care and the penal system;
- prohibit all expressions of violence in schools, whether by pupils or teachers, including physical violence, emotional violence (bullying), sexual harassment, stigma and discrimination;
- make the negligent treatment of a child by any person who has care of that child an offence but poverty can be used as a defence; and
- establish an independent child-friendly complaints avenue outside of the criminal legal system available to child victims/survivors of violence.
- call for the reporting and investigation of all child deaths<sup>128</sup>;
- counter spousal violence and its impact on children including (but not restricted to):
  - i) Criminal assault against women in the home is a specific offence;
  - ii) Domestic violence legislative provisions provide for the removal of the perpetrator from the home by police following acts or threats of violence;
  - iii) A system of apprehended violence orders; and
  - iv) Definition of mental violence includes witnessing acts of violence;
- identify and prohibit traditional practices<sup>129</sup> harmful to children and prescribe appropriate penalties for those who violate these provisions;

- ensure that all provisions protecting children from violence are free from discrimination; and
- call for institutions dealing with reports of violence against children to record and report disaggregated data in relation to reports received and actions taken.

Commission's views

- 8.7 Some children are particularly vulnerable because of gender, race, ethnic origin, disability or social status. Children born outside of wedlock are at risk of abandonment due to fear of public ridicule and/or severe admonishment by family and/or community<sup>130</sup>. This was the cause for a single mother to abandon her new born baby in Police v Toga Pe'e Fuimaono<sup>131</sup>.
- 8.8 Child abandonment can also stem from the emotional breakdown and feelings of despair due to domestic problems<sup>132</sup>. This was the case in Police v Rosa Loi<sup>133</sup> and Police v Saipaia<sup>134</sup>.
- 8.9 The Chief Justice in his concluding comments in Police v Saipaia<sup>135</sup> expressed a concern and the need for the relevant authorities and the non-governmental organisations to investigate the cause(s) of mothers abandoning newly born babies and identify practical solutions<sup>136</sup>.
- 8.10 In assessing the Baseline Research findings, the Commission agrees with the outcomes. It recommends that necessary reforms be undertaken based on the issues identified in the Baseline Report, in relation to violence and maltreatment except in the case of corporal punishment where the Commission recommends that a progressive approach be adopted as indicated in the section of this Report dealing with cultural factors which impact child care and protection in Part 2 of this Report.
- 8.11 It is also important to note that some of the relevant concerns pointed out in the Baseline Research have been addressed already in recent reforms and have formed part of legislative amendments or enactments currently awaiting Parliaments approval. The Family Safety Bill 2011, addresses concerns in relation to domestic violence. The Bill provides a detailed definition of domestic violence<sup>137</sup>. It also defines the different types of violence identified under the Baseline Research<sup>138</sup>.

<sup>136</sup> The causes of child abandonment vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction and change from time to time. It is often linked to: poor or no support from the father of the baby; mothers having very poor social and moral adjustment in early life and have difficulty in accepting responsibility; and babies born from extramarital affairs (Barthelemy, 1972).

<sup>137</sup> Clause 2 defines domestic violence as meaning physical abuse; sexual abuse; emotional, verbal and psychological abuse; intimidation; harassment: stalking; any other controlling or abusive behaviour towards a complainant where such conduct harms, or may cause imminent harm to, the safety, health or wellbeing of the complainant.

<sup>138</sup> These are: physical abuse; sexual abuse; emotional, verbal and psychological abuse; intimidation; harassment; and stalking.

Recommendation 22: The new Care and Protection Legislation should:

- clearly define and strictly prohibit all forms of violence against children<sup>139</sup>;
- prohibit all expressions of violence in schools, whether by pupils or teachers, including physical violence, emotional violence (bullying), sexual harassment, stigma and discrimination;
- identify and prohibit traditional practices<sup>140</sup> harmful to children and prescribe appropriate penalties for those who violate these provisions; and
- call for institutions dealing with reports of violence against children to record and report disaggregated data in relation to reports received and actions taken.

9. Sexual Abuse and Sexual Exploitation

9.1 Sexual abuse is defined under the Family Safety Bill as any conduct that abuses, humiliates, degrades or otherwise violates the sexual integrity and privacy of the complainant without his or her free will or consent<sup>141</sup>.

9.2 Sexual exploitation is the abuse of a position of vulnerability, differential power, or trust for sexual purposes. It often includes profiting monetarily, socially or politically from the exploitation of such person as well as personal sexual gratification<sup>142</sup>. Sexual exploitation often involves child prostitution, trafficking of children for sexual abuse and exploitation, child pornography and sexual slavery<sup>143</sup>.

9.3 The review of relevant legislation under the Baseline Research reveals that Samoa has only complied with 6% of the relevant indicators for sexual abuse and sexual exploitation<sup>144</sup>. The Baseline Research indicated in its findings that the Crimes Ordinance needs major reform. The relevant criminal provisions dealing with sexual assault and abuse of female children require strengthening. These provisions require amendments to provide male children with the same protection. There should also be higher penalties for cases involving children.

9.4 The Baseline Research also indicated that the age thresholds in these provisions need to be reconsidered to provide better protection for children between the ages of 16 and 18 years. It proposes that explicit definitions of sexual offences against children such as sexual harassment, be provided and given higher penalties. The definitions should also take into consideration international development in defining sexual offences against children relating to information and communication technologies such as the internet<sup>145</sup>.

9.5 The Baseline Research pointed out that in order for Samoa to fully comply with the relevant indicators its criminal laws and related legislation need to:

<sup>140</sup> For example, early marriage, female genital mutilation, honour killings, the tattooing of children, banishment of one or both parents, banishment of a child's whole family, destruction of a child's family properties as part of a traditional fine.

- separately criminalise and penalize all forms of unlawful sexual acts against children as separate and serious crimes much more serious than similar conduct against adults;
- establish under criminal law an age which a child is deemed to be unable to consent to sexual activities;
- remove the defence of honest and reasonable belief that the victim/survivor was of legal age;
- set the minimum legal age for marriage for boys and girls at 18 years;
- put in place special protections for vulnerable children, such as disabled children;
- create a separate and specific criminal offence(s) for prostituting children, defined in accordance with the Optional Protocol and sanctioned in a manner that reflects the gravity of the crime;
- create separate and specific criminal offence(s) relating to child pornography that covers internet pornography, defined in accordance with the Optional Protocol and sanctioned in a manner that reflects the gravity of the crime. Offences should also include the production, possession or dissemination of child pornography;
- include ‘extraterritorial’ provisions permitting the prosecution of nationals/residents for unlawful acts committed against children in other countries;
- properly define unlawful sexual activity involving children;
- have no exemption from rape prosecution for marital rape;
- define rape as including penetration of any part of the body by any body part/object and is not gender specific;
- explicitly prohibit sexual harassment between children and between children and adults in all institutional contexts;
- ensure that Government has acceded to and promoted bilateral and multilateral measures to protect the child from sexual abuse and sexual exploitation;
- exclude discriminatory provisions in protective legislation in relation to sexual abuse and exploitation; and
- call for institutions dealing with reports of sexual abuse and exploitation of children to record and report disaggregated data in relation to reports received and actions taken.

Commission’s views

9.6 The Commission agrees with the Baseline Report findings<sup>146</sup>. It supports the call for relevant law reform to be undertaken to address the issues identified. In Samoa the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children can be addressed under the Crimes Ordinance under its Sexual Crimes and Crimes against Public Welfare provisions<sup>147</sup>. These provisions criminalises rape, incest, sexual intercourse and indecency with a girl of a certain age and state of mind, homosexual activities, keeping a brothel and living off the earnings of prostitution.

- 9.7 The Indecent Publication Ordinance 1960 prohibits the sale, printing, drawing, publication, circulation of an indecent document<sup>148</sup>. Indecent document is defined under the Ordinance as any book, newspaper, picture, film, photograph, print, or writing, a paper or other thing of any description whatsoever, which has printed, impressed or attached to it any indecent word, statement, significant sign, indecent picture, illustration, representation, or which unduly emphasises matters of sex, horror, crime, cruelty, or violence<sup>149</sup>.
- 9.8 It is important to note however, that a recent review of the Crimes Ordinance by the Commission has addressed some of the issues raised in the Baseline Report. These changes are currently embodied in the Crimes Bill 2011 awaiting Parliament's endorsement.
- 9.9 The Crimes Bill specifically provides for all forms of unlawful sexual acts against children<sup>150</sup>. However, the age threshold issue has yet to be increased in some clauses provide protection for children between the ages 16 and 18 years<sup>151</sup>.
- 9.10 Consent and honest and reasonable belief the victim/survivor was of legal age are generally not available as defences to sexual crimes under the Crimes Bill<sup>152</sup>. However they are a defence to a charge under the proposed crime of sexual conduct with a person under the age of 16<sup>153</sup>. The onus however is on the accused to prove on the balance of probabilities that he or she was under the age of 21 years at the time of the commission of the act and before the time of the act concerned, he or she had taken reasonable steps to find out whether the victim was over the age of 16 years; he or she believed on reasonable grounds that the young person was of or over the age of 16 years; and the young person consented.
- 9.11 Rape has been redefined under the Bill. It is now sexual violation<sup>154</sup>. Sexual violation is defined as the act of a male raping a female or the act of a person having unlawful sexual connection with another person<sup>155</sup>. Sexual connection means a connection occasioned by the penetration of the genitalia or the anus of any person by any part of the body of any other person; or any object held or manipulated by any other person, also means a connection between the mouth or tongue of any person and any part of the genitalia or anus of any other person. It also means the continuation of sexual connection as described above<sup>156</sup>. A person convicted of the proposed crime of unlawful sexual connection is liable to an imprisonment term not exceeding 14 years<sup>157</sup>.
- 9.12 "Marital rape" is also addressed under the Crimes Bill. It provides that a person may be convicted of sexual violation in respect of sexual connection with another person notwithstanding that those persons were married to each other at the time of that sexual connection<sup>158</sup>.

- 9.13 The Bill also provides protection for vulnerable children such as disabled children<sup>159</sup>. A person who is convicted of having or attempting to have a sexual intercourse with a person who is severely intellectually disabled is liable to an imprisonment term not exceeding 7 years<sup>160</sup>. A person who indecently assaults or attempts to indecently assault a person who is severely intellectually disabled will also be liable for a term of imprisonment not exceeding 7 years<sup>161</sup>.
- 9.14 Child pornography is addressed under the Bill. A person convicted of publication, distribution or exhibition of indecent material on a child is liable upon conviction to an imprisonment term not exceeding 5 years<sup>162</sup>.
- 9.15 The Bill's provisions dealing with crimes against public welfare criminalises brothel keeping<sup>163</sup>, keeping a place of resort for homosexual acts<sup>164</sup>, prostitution<sup>165</sup>, solicitation<sup>166</sup>, living on earnings of prostitution<sup>167</sup>, procuring sexual intercourse<sup>168</sup>, are wide enough to protect children from sexual abuse and exploitation. A person convicted under any of these clauses can be liable to a range of imprisonment terms, the highest being up to 10 years.
- 9.16 The Bill also deals specifically with the sexual exploitation of people under 18 years of age.<sup>169</sup> A person convicted under this clause is liable to an imprisonment term not exceeding 10 years. Sexual exploitation is also recognised as an aggravating factor under the proposed crimes of smuggling migrants and trafficking in people by means of coercion or deception<sup>170</sup>.
- 9.17 Behaviour such as cyber bullying, solicitation of children on the internet and other offensive behaviour associated with electronic communication that is affecting children of this age, can be caught under the provisions dealing with harassment utilising means of electronic communication and solicitation of children<sup>171</sup>. This can capture a person who intentionally initiates any electronic communication, with the intent to coerce, intimidate, harass, or cause substantial emotional distress to a person, using an electronic system to support severe, repeated, and hostile behaviour. A person convicted under this clause will be liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years.

9.18 The Crimes Bill also contains extraterritorial provisions that can permit the prosecution of nationals or residents for unlawful acts committed against children in other countries<sup>172</sup>.

Recommendation 23: In light of the recent reforms, Samoa's criminal laws still need to:

- create a separate and specific criminal offence(s) for prostituting children, defined in accordance with the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of a Child and sanctioned in a manner that reflects the gravity of the crime;
- properly define unlawful sexual activity involving children;
- call for institutions dealing with reports of sexual abuse and exploitation of children to record and report disaggregated data in relation to reports received and actions taken.

Recommendation 24: Samoa also needs to accede to and promote bilateral and multilateral measures to protect the child from sexual abuse and sexual exploitation. This will guarantee the effective enforcement of the extraterritorial application of its criminal laws under the new Bill through international cooperation.

10. Abduction, Sale and Trafficking

10.1 Child abduction or child theft and sale of children are often discussed in the context of trafficking<sup>173</sup>. Children who are victims of trafficking are highly vulnerable to sexual abuse and exploitation<sup>174</sup>.

10.2 The sale of children is any act or transaction whereby a child is transferred by any person or group of persons to another for a consideration<sup>175</sup>. The concept of sale overlaps with that of trafficking, except that trafficking implies a practice whereby a child is moved.

10.3 Trafficking is the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of persons, by means of threat, use of force or other forms of coercion, abduction, fraud, deception, abuse of power or of a position of vulnerability, giving or receiving of payments or benefits to achieve the consent of a person having control over another person for the purpose of exploitation<sup>176</sup>. Trafficking can be from one country to another but it can also occur within a country, often from rural to urban areas<sup>177</sup>.

10.4 The smuggling of migrants, although illegal, is not trafficking if the migrants freely contract the services of smugglers and if they are not exploited. Smuggling however becomes trafficking if fraud or deception of the migrants is involved, or if they are forced to live and work in conditions of servitude<sup>178</sup>.

10.5 The Crimes Ordinance in its current status does not criminalise the sale and trafficking of people. The Ordinance however provides for the criminalization of “kidnapping” which is an activity that is analogous to human trafficking. A person is guilty of kidnapping under the Ordinance if he or she unlawfully carries off or detains any person without the person’s consent or with the person’s consent obtained by fraud or duress, with the intention to cause the person to be confined, or imprisoned; to be sent or taken out of Samoa; or to hold the person for ransom or for service<sup>179</sup>. A person convicted of kidnapping is liable to an imprisonment term not exceeding 10 years.

10.6 Abduction is also a crime under the Crimes Ordinance. A person convicted for abducting a woman or girl is liable to an imprisonment term not exceeding 7 years<sup>180</sup>.

10.7 The Baseline Research reveals that the current Crimes Ordinance does not fully comply with any of the relevant indicators for Abduction, Sale and Trafficking of children<sup>181</sup>. It found the relevant legislation and guidelines very weak. It stated that better protection of children is guaranteed through the specific and comprehensive anti-trafficking laws that offer high penalties indicating the seriousness of such crime, the effective prosecution of the traffickers and all involved in trafficking, and the rehabilitation and repatriation of victims.

10.8 The Baseline Research provides that in order for Samoa to fully comply with indicators, it needs to<sup>182</sup>:

- include a specific crime relating to the sale of children, defined broadly in accordance with the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of a Child and sanctioned in a manner that reflects the gravity of the crime;
- include a specific crime of trafficking in humans, defined in accordance with the Trafficking Protocol<sup>183</sup>, and sanctioned in a manner that reflects the gravity of the crime;
- criminalize all activities related to trafficking, including forced or compulsory labour, debt bondage, forced marriage, forced prostitution, unlawful confinement, labour exploitation, and illegally withholding identity papers;
- put in place measures to assist the prosecution of those engaged in child trafficking outside of Samoa; and

<sup>183</sup> Trafficking is defined in the Trafficking Protocol as the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of persons, by means of the threat or use of force or other forms of coercion, of abduction, of fraud, of deception, of the abuse of power or of a position of vulnerability or of the giving or receiving of payments or benefits to achieve the consent of a person having control over another person, for the purpose of exploitation

- to provide procedures and guidelines for immediate and safe emergency care for children who have been rescued from trafficking;
- designate a central authority to deal with issues of international child abductions;
- to secure the prompt return of children wrongfully removed to or retained in Samoa and to ensure that rights of custody and access under the law of other countries are effectively respected;
- empower the Courts to make any orders necessary to prevent child abduction;
- ensure the effective communication of court orders to border officials<sup>184</sup>;
- empower state institutions to release information that will help to trace the whereabouts of abducted children;
- ensure that human trafficking provisions provide additional penalties where trafficking involves children;
- impose civil or criminal liability on legal entities<sup>185</sup> for trafficking offences;
- seize and confiscate goods, assets and other instrumentalities used to commit or facilitate trafficking, and that proceeds or assets confiscated from traffickers be used to support trafficking victims/survivors;
- promote cooperation between relevant agencies, in particular the police, immigration and welfare services, in identifying child victims/survivors of trafficking;
- provide guidelines for border officials for the identification and handling of child victims/survivors of trafficking;
- permit the use of testimony of foreign trafficked victims/survivors taken before repatriation, for example, through the use of video and audio tapes of the trafficked victims/survivors' testimony as evidence<sup>186</sup>;
- permit foreign trafficked children to remain in the country, temporarily or permanently, in appropriate cases, and in accordance with the stated views of the child<sup>187</sup>;
- provide protection, rehabilitation and support services to all child victims/survivors of trafficking regardless of nationality and agreement to appear as witnesses in any criminal proceedings; and
- provide guidelines for the safe and timely return and repatriation of child victims/survivors of cross-border trafficking where appropriate.

Commission's views

10.9 The Commission agrees with the Baseline Research finding. It recommends that appropriate law reform be undertaken to address the issues identified. It is worth noting

however that some of these issues have been addressed in recent law reforms and form parts of draft legislation currently awaiting Parliamentary endorsement.

10.10 Under the Crimes Bills 2011, a person can be charged with the smuggling of migrants<sup>188</sup>. A person guilty of smuggling migrants is liable to an imprisonment term not exceeding 7 years.

10.11 The Bill also criminalises trafficking<sup>189</sup>. A person guilty of trafficking in people by means of coercion or deception is liable to an imprisonment term not exceeding 10 years. If trafficking is linked to activities such as forced or compulsory labour, debt bondage, forced marriage, forced prostitution, unlawful confinement, labour exploitation and illegally withholding of identity papers, then it is highly likely the convicted will receive a sentence on the higher end of the scale<sup>190</sup>. The age of the person in respect of whom the offence was committed and in particular, whether the person was under the age of 18 years is also an aggravating factor<sup>191</sup>.

10.12 Once the Crimes Bill is enacted and enforced, the goods, assets and other instrumentalities used to commit or facilitate trafficking, and proceeds or assets confiscated from traffickers can be forfeited by the State under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2007. However, legislative changes are recommended to the Proceeds of Crime Act 2007 to allow the use of part of the proceeds of trafficking forfeited to be used to support trafficking victims/survivors.

10.13 The Commission's Final Report 07/12 on the review of the Criminal Procedure Act also recommended the use of video-conferencing to take the evidence of witnesses overseas. This will not only suit victims/survivors of trafficking, who have been repatriated before the commencement of a criminal case but it can also be adopted in the cases where a child was a victim/survivor of a sexual crime. This recommendation should also be extended to include the use of other electronic means and formats such as high definition, digital or analogue video recordings and audio recordings to take testimonies of children as evidence.

Recommendation 25: In light of the recent criminal law reviews, Samoa still needs to:

- include a specific crime relating to the sale of children, defined broadly in accordance with the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of a Child and sanctioned in a manner that reflects the gravity of the crime;
- permit the use of testimony of foreign trafficked victims/survivors taken before repatriation, for example, through the use of video and audio tapes of the trafficked victims/survivors' testimony as evidence<sup>192</sup>; and
- impose civil or criminal liability on legal entities<sup>193</sup> for trafficking offences.

Recommendation 26: The proposed legal framework for child care and protection should:

<sup>192</sup> This is being addressed in the new Criminal Procedure Bill 2012 which is still in draft form.

<sup>193</sup> For example, travel agencies, marriage brokers, sex shops, bars, brothels or employment agencies.

- designate a central authority (depending on available resources or designate an existing one) to deal with issues of international child abductions;
- have procedures and guidelines for immediate and safe emergency care for children who have been rescued from trafficking;
- ensure the effective communication of court orders to border officials;
- empower state institutions to release information that will help to trace the whereabouts of abducted children;
- promote cooperation between relevant agencies, in particular the police, immigration and welfare services, in identifying child victims/survivors of trafficking; and
- provide protection, rehabilitation and support services to all child victims/survivors of trafficking regardless of nationality and agreement to appear as witnesses in any criminal proceedings.

Recommendation 27: Samoa's immigration laws should:

- permit foreign trafficked children to remain in the country, temporarily or permanently, in appropriate cases, and in accordance with the stated views of the child;
- have guidelines for border officials for the identification and handling of child victims/survivors of trafficking;
- secure the prompt return of children wrongfully removed to or retained in the Samoa and to ensure that rights of custody and access under the law of other countries are effectively respected; and
- have guidelines for the safe and timely return and repatriation of child victims/survivors of cross-border trafficking where appropriate.

Recommendation 28: Amend the relevant provision of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2007 to allow the use of proceeds or part of the proceeds of trafficking forfeited, to be used to support trafficking victims/survivors.

11. Child Labour and Children in the Streets

- 11.1 Child labour refers to the employment of children in any work that deprives children of their childhood, interferes with their ability to attend regular school, and is mentally, physically, socially or morally dangerous and harmful<sup>194</sup>. Therefore, not all work done by children should be classified as child labour<sup>195</sup>. Only work that is dangerous or carried out in unhealthy conditions that can result in a child being killed or injured and/or ill as a consequence of poor safety, poor health standards and poor working arrangements should be classified as child labour and should be targeted for elimination<sup>196</sup>.
- 11.2 In Samoa, the Labour and Employment Act 1972 prohibits the employment of a child under the age of 15 years in any place of employment except in a safe and light work suited to his or her capacity and subject to such conditions imposed by the Commissioner<sup>197</sup>.
- 11.3 The Occupational Health and Safety Act 2002, directs an employer to take all reasonably practicable steps to protect the safety, health and welfare at work of employees and to provide and maintain a safe and healthy working environment including substances, systems of work and any building or public or private area in which work takes place<sup>198</sup>.
- 11.4 The Education Act 2009, prohibits the employment of a compulsory school-aged<sup>199</sup> child to engage in street trading or to carry out other work of any kind, whether for reward or not at any time during school hours; or at any other time if the work would prevent or interfere with the child's attendance at school, active participation in school activities or the child's educational development<sup>200</sup>. An exception to this provision is if the Chief Executive Officer of the Ministry of Education Sports and Culture has exempted the child from the obligation to be enrolled as a pupil at a school on the ground that the child is receiving a suitable education elsewhere than at school; or the Chief Executive Officer has exempted the child from the obligation to attend school each day during the whole of the school day<sup>201</sup>.
- 11.5 The Police Offences Ordinance 1961, provides that a person may peddle certain goods<sup>202</sup>, upon obtaining a licence from the Police Commissioner provided that the selling of Samoan food stuff does not breach any law regulating markets<sup>203</sup>. It also prohibits people from wandering abroad or placing themselves in a public place to beg or gather alms or causes, procures or encourages a child to beg<sup>204</sup>. A person convicted under this provision is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine of ST$100.

11.6 The review of these legislation under the Baseline Research reveals that Samoa has not fully complied with 82% of the indicators for Child Labour and Children in the Streets<sup>205</sup>.

11.7 The Baseline Research states that the protection provided by the existing laws needs strengthening. The existing laws need to explicitly address in detail the pay/wages of children; the conditions and the type of work that is permissible or not permissible for the different age groups. The current laws also need a complaints mechanism that is child specific and child friendly.

11.8 The Baseline Research also found the enforcement provisions of the Education Act 2009 are inadequate particularly in relation to the increase in child vendors in Apia. This is attributed to lack of inter-ministerial coordination and cooperation, training and resources<sup>206</sup>.

11.9 In order for Samoa to fully comply with indicators, it needs to:

- ensure that they do not criminalize vagrancy or other status offences and children living and working on the street are not subject to arbitrary police arrest or detention;
- provide appropriate standards for children's work and pay in both the formal and informal sectors;
- define minimum age for employment as not less than 15 years and at least equal to the age of completion of compulsory education;
- include provisions regulating permissible work by children over the minimum age, including regulations defining the hours and conditions of work for children (formal and informal sector);
- prohibit anyone under the age of 18 years from engaging in any type of employment or work that by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out is likely to jeopardize the health, safety or morals of young persons, including hazardous work, work that interferes with the child's education or any work that involves cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, the sale of children or servitude;
- clearly define the types of work that are prohibited for children;
- specify exemptions to the definition of child labour<sup>207</sup>;
- require that employers should have, and produce on demand, proof of age of all children working for them;
- train and sufficiently empower Labour inspectors to enforce child labour laws, including the authority to immediately remove a child from a work environment that is hazardous or harmful to the child's health or physical, mental, spiritual, moral or social development; and
- provide independent, child-friendly complaints avenue for investigation, consideration and resolution of complaints regarding breaches of children's labour rights;

- prohibit the use of children for all forms of research, including medical or scientific experimentation, unless appropriate consents have been obtained from the child and/or parents or legal guardians; and
- establish a national strategy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labour.

Submissions:

11.10 The members of the NCCRC and CRCP voiced their dissatisfaction with the enforcement of the Education Act 2009 in relation to the prohibition of compulsory aged children from selling goods during school hours. The members of the NCCRC and CRCP also voiced their concern with regards to the age of children selling goods on the streets in Apia as well as the number of hours they spend on the streets.

11.11 The representative from the MOPP pointed out that the requirements under section 20(b) which calls for them check the child’s attendance at school, active participation in school activities and educational development renders it onerous and difficult to enforce.

11.12 The members of the NCCRC and CRCP recommended that compulsory aged children should be prohibited from selling goods on the street after 7 p.m. They also proposed that an age limit be set for children selling goods on the street. The concern was that children below the age of seven (7) years were seen selling goods as late as 10 p.m. during week days.

Commission’s views

11.13 The Commission agrees with the Baseline Research findings. Appropriate law reform should be undertaken to address the issues identified. Children in Samoa often help their parents in the home or in the family plantation or business, as long as the work is not dangerous and does not interfere with school attendance and other normal childhood activities<sup>208</sup>. This is usually referred to as ‘light work’. The term ‘child labour’ refers only to forms of employment or unpaid work that violate the rights of children and should be prohibited.

11.14 It is also important to identify the root causes of child labour. International reports have identified poverty and scarcity as the root cause of children entering child labour<sup>209</sup>. It is important therefore for Samoa to determine whether poverty is an issue in Samoa and what activities are causing financial pressures on the incomes of families that is causing children to engage in work that is classified as child labour.

11.15 Some of the issues raised in the Baseline Report have been addressed in recent law reforms and form parts of draft legislation currently awaiting Parliamentary endorsement.

11.16 The Labour and Employment Relations Bill 2011, now prohibits anyone under the age of 18 from engaging in any type of employment or work that by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out is likely to jeopardize the health, safety or morals of young persons, including hazardous work, work that interferes with the child’s education or any work that involves cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment and the sale of children or servitude<sup>210</sup>. The Bill still maintains that a person must not employ a child under the age of 15 years of age in a place of employment except in safe and light work suited to his or her capacity, and subject to such conditions as may be determined by the Chief Executive Officer of the Ministry of Commerce Industry and Labour<sup>211</sup>. The age of employment for children provided under the Labour and Employment Relations Bill 2011 is equivalent to the age of completion of compulsory education provided under the Education Act 2009, as obligated under CRC<sup>212</sup>.

11.17 The Crimes Bill 2011, also criminalises forced labour of people under 18 years<sup>213</sup>.

11.18 The Commission supports the recommendations by the NCCRC and CRCP to prohibit compulsory aged children from selling goods on the street after 7 p.m. The Commission also believes that an age limit should be set for children selling goods on the street. The Commission proposes the age of 10 years<sup>214</sup>.

Recommendation 29: The Labour and Employment Act 1972 and/or Labour and Employment Relations Bill 2011 should be amended to require employers to have and be ready to produce on demand proof of age of all children working for them.

Recommendation 30: The Crimes Ordinance should be amended to explicitly prohibit the use of children for all forms of research, including medical or scientific experimentation, unless appropriate consents have been obtained from the child and/or parents or legal guardians.

Recommendation 31: An independent child-friendly national forum should be established to hear complaints, investigate, consider and resolve complaints regarding breaches of children's labour rights through the Ministry of Commerce Industry and Labour (MCIL).

Recommendation 32: A national strategy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labour in Samoa should be established if nothing has been established to date by the MCIL.

Recommendation 33: The Education Act 2009 should be amended to prohibit children below the age of 10 years from selling goods on the street at any time.

Recommendation 34: The Education Act 2009 should be amended to provide that any child over the age of 10 years who sells goods on the street should be prohibited from selling such goods after 7 p.m. everyday.

<sup>214</sup> The Commission believes that since the age of innocence (criminal liability) is set at 10 years, this will be a suitable age.

12. Child Friendly Investigative and Court Procedures

- 12.1 Child-friendly investigative and court procedures refer to investigative and court procedures adapted to address the needs and rights of the child. They ensure that the rights of a child are respected and effectively implemented to the highest attainable level giving due consideration to the child's level of maturity and understanding and the circumstances of a case<sup>215</sup>. This will promote a justice system that is age appropriate, speedy, diligent and accessible by children<sup>216</sup>.
- 12.2 In the Police Powers Act 2007, the only protection for children provided under the Act is the permission for the presence of a relative whilst a forensic procedure<sup>217</sup> is being carried out on a minor<sup>218</sup>.
- 12.3 The Constitution provides for the exclusion of members of the public and representatives of news services from all or part of the trial in the interests of justice, morals, public order or national security, or where the protection of children or the parties' private life requires it<sup>219</sup>.
- 12.4 The relevant orders<sup>220</sup> can be made under the Criminal Procedure Act 1972 which can be used to prevent child victims/survivors from having direct confrontation with persons accused of violating their rights and from hostile, insensitive or repetitive questioning or interrogation<sup>221</sup>. The granting of these orders are not automatic but dependent on the discretion of the Court. On the application of an informant, before any hearing, a Judge or Magistrate may make an order for the evidence of any witness to be taken at any place if they are satisfied that it is desirable or expedient in the interests of justice. The Court can exclude the public and representatives of news services from all or part of the trial and prohibit the publication of the name, or of any particulars likely to lead to the identification of, any person connected with the trial<sup>222</sup>.
- 12.5 A similar provision exists under the Young Offenders Act 2007 which automatically prohibits the publishing by the Media or any other person, the name and identifying details of a victim involved in an offence for which a young person is charged<sup>223</sup>. A person who does not comply is liable upon conviction to a fine not exceeding ST$10,000. It is important to note however, that this is only limited to matters heard in the Youth Court<sup>224</sup>.

<sup>217</sup> Forensic procedure means: an examination of a part of the body that requires touching of the body or removal of clothing; the taking of a sample of hair; the taking of a sample from or under a fingernail or toenail; the taking of a sample of saliva or a sample by a swab; the taking of a sample by swab or washing from any external part of the body; the taking of a sample by vacuum suction, by scraping or by lifting by tape from any external part of the body; the taking of a handprint, fingerprint, footprint or toe print; the taking of a photograph of, or an impression or cast of a wound from, a part of the body; the taking of a sample for breathalyser analysis; and the taking of a sample of blood or other bodily fluid. 12.6 The Evidence Ordinance 1961 also empowers the Court to exercise its jurisdiction to limit the cross-examination of any witness as to credit, and refuse to permit any such cross-examination<sup>225</sup>. This can reduce trauma and secondary traumatisation of child witnesses who are victims/survivors of sexual assault.

12.7 The Alternative Dispute Resolution Act 2007<sup>226</sup> can also provide some protection for a child who is involved in an alternative dispute resolution proceeding. A Court can make a pre-trial order upon application to protect the interests of a person and to ensure that a fair trial is facilitated. This provision can provide some assistance in ensuring that the best interests of the child is given primary consideration in any alternative dispute resolution proceeding.

12.8 A review of the relevant legislation dealing with Investigative and court procedures during the Baseline Research reveals that Samoa has not fully complied with 92% of the relevant indicators<sup>227</sup>.

12.9 The Baseline Research stated that the relevant law and policy are silent on many essential aspects of supportive and child friendly investigative and court procedures<sup>228</sup>. It acknowledged the strong recognition of the role of informal customary processes as part of the alternative dispute resolution and safeguards are in place to ensure that victims/survivors are not pressured into taking such an option against their will. However, particular care is needed to ensure this specifically in relation to children who may be additionally vulnerable to coercion in such matters<sup>229</sup>.

12.10 In order for Samoa to fully comply with indicators, it needs to:

- include measures to protect the rights and interests of children at all stages of the justice process and to reduce trauma and secondary traumatisation, including:
  - inter-agency referral procedures to promote coordination between police, health care workers, social workers and other service providers;
  - coordination/referral mechanism is in place for children who come to the attention of the police;
  - in any actions taken the best interests of the child will be the primary consideration;
  - any actions taken to take into account the child's views in accordance with their age and maturity and respect the child's right to privacy;
  - the law guarantees children the right to participate in any judicial proceedings that affect them, to express their views, and to have those views given due weight;
  - child-friendly interview environments and interview techniques<sup>230</sup>;
  - special procedures to reduce the number and length of interviews which child victims/survivors are subjected to;

  - law permits child-friendly court procedures, including alternative arrangements for giving testimony such as screens, video-taped evidence and closed circuit television;
  - measures to ensure child victims/survivors are protected from direct confrontation with persons accused of violating their rights and from hostile, insensitive or repetitive questioning or interrogation;
  - law requires investigations and trials of cases involving child witnesses to be expedited and prioritized in the legal system;
  - measures to protect the child's privacy, such as closed court proceedings and bans on publishing the child's identity or any information leading to identification of the child;
  - measures to protect the safety of child victims/survivors and their family and to prevent intimidation and retaliation, including safe shelter (emergency and longer-term), relocation, and prohibition on the disclosure of information concerning the victim/survivor's identity and whereabouts;
  - requirement that police, prosecutors, lawyers and judges receive specialized training in dealing with cases where children are victims/survivors;

Submissions

12.11 The CRCP representative from Aoga Fiamalamalama School pointed out in their written submissions that for persons with health disability, sign language is a need. Therefore, there is a need for police officers and officers of the court to know sign language or have access to a person who can communicate through sign language to assist them in their investigation or during a case in court if the victim or accused is a person with a hearing disability. The representative from Aoga Fiamalamalama School also encouraged family members to learn sign language in order to assist a person with a severe hearing disability during an investigation or in court.

Commission's views

12.12 The Commission approves the Baseline Research findings and issues identified in the legislative review. Appropriate law reform needs to be undertaken to address these issues. It is important to note that some of these issues have been addressed in recent law reforms and have form parts of draft legislation currently awaiting Parliamentary endorsement.

12.13 The Family Safety Bill 2011, places a duty on police officers to assist and inform complainants of domestic violence of their rights. The assistance provided by the police under the Bill involves: finding a suitable shelter, to obtaining medical treatment or counseling service where needed; providing written material or explanation in a language that the complainant understands, the remedies available at his or her disposal and the right to lodge a criminal complaint; or where the complainant is a person under 18 years of age, to refer such person to a Child Welfare Officer<sup>232</sup>. The Court is authorized under the Bill to refuse the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence any contact with his or her child or order contact with conditions, if in the Court's view such refusal or limited contact is in the best interest of the child<sup>233</sup>.

12.14 The Family Safety Bill also makes provisions for child-friendly court procedures and alternative arrangements for giving testimony such as screens, video-taped evidence and closed circuit television<sup>234</sup>. It makes provisions that can protect a child's privacy, such as closed court proceedings and bans on publishing the child's identity or any information leading to identification of the child<sup>235</sup>.

12.15 A 'no drop' policy is also provided for under the Family Safety Bill. It provides that where a report of domestic violence involves any form of physical or sexual abuse, and provided that there is sufficient evidence for doing so, every Police Officer handling the matter shall ensure and undertake to do all things necessary in order that a charge or information is laid with the Court in order to commence prosecution of the matter in Court; and not endeavour to withdraw a charge or information laid<sup>236</sup>. The Commissioner of Police however, can withdraw such charge or information laid<sup>237</sup>.

12.16 The Commission's Final Report 07/12 on the Criminal Procedure Act recommended that a person charged with an offence that occurred in the context of domestic violence not be bailable as of right<sup>238</sup>.

12.17 The Criminal Procedure Bill 2012 provides offences which relate to assault on a child or by a male on a female under the proposed Crimes Act 2012. The Bill also provides for the taking of evidence of a witness out of Court<sup>239</sup>. This relates to child witnesses and victims who cannot present their evidence in Court. An order to take such special recourse however is dependent on the discretion of a presiding judge<sup>240</sup>.

12.18 The Commissions also acknowledges the submission made by the CRCP representative from Aoga Fiamalamalama School. This is an issue that needs to be considered when engaging interpreters in Court and during police investigations.

Recommendation 35: In order for national investigative and court procedures to be child friendly and protect the rights and interests of children at all stages of the justice process they need to:

- have comprehensive inter-agency referral procedures to promote coordination between police, health care workers, social workers and other service providers;
- have specialised units (in police, prosecutors and courts) designated to handle cases involving child victims, survivors or witnesses;
- specialised units should undergo special training for police, prosecutors, lawyers and judges in dealing with cases where children are victims/survivors;
- take the best interests of the child into consideration in every matter that concerns them;
- take into account the child's views in accordance with their age;
- adopt child-friendly interview environments and interview techniques<sup>241</sup>;
- control the number and length of interviews child victims/survivors are subjected to;
- provide support at all stages of the process, including social and legal counselling and allow the victim/survivor or witness to become familiar with the court process;
- give investigations and trials of cases involving child witnesses priority so that they are conducted expediently;
- adopt measures to prevent intimidation and retaliation towards a child victim/survivor and their family such as safe shelter (emergency and longer-term), relocation, and prohibition on the disclosure of information concerning the victim/survivor's identity.

13. Rehabilitation

13.1 Rehabilitation is a process where a person who has suffered violence, trafficking, sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, neglect, torture or any other form of cruel, inhuman, degrading treatment or punishment undergoes a healing process aimed at facilitating mental, physical and spiritual recovery before being urged to return to society<sup>242</sup>.

13.2 The Baseline Research found the laws in Samoa to be silent on rehabilitation of victims and survivors of violence, trafficking, sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, neglect, torture or any other form of cruel, inhuman, degrading treatment or punishment. Samoa has not fully complied with any of the Rehabilitation indicators<sup>243</sup>. There is some degree of protection however, for survivor/victims' privacy/identity as well as protection from any possible intimidation or prosecution from the perpetrator<sup>244</sup>.

13.3 In order for Samoa to fully comply with all the relevant indicators, it needs to:

- provide for a range of services to support the protection and psychological recovery and reintegration of child victims/survivors of abuse and exploitation, including:
  - short-term care, where necessary<sup>245</sup>;
  - medical care;
  - psychological counselling;
  - advice about their legal rights;
  - education, employment and training opportunities; and
  - protection for the victim/survivor and his/her family from intimidation and retaliation;
- provide standards or guidelines for the above programs and services;
- protect all child victims/survivors of exploitation from prosecution and involuntary detention;
- provide independent, child-friendly complaints tribunal for the investigation and resolution of complaints regarding discriminatory treatment by child victims/survivors;
- compensate child victims/survivors of neglect, exploitation, abuse, torture or any other form of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment or armed conflicts;
- provide for the protection of the privacy and identity of child victims/survivors with appropriate sanctions;
- provide that preference be given to promoting recovery and reintegration in families and communities (rather than institutional care); and
- seek the views of a child in relation to any recovery and reintegration processes.

Commission's views

13.4 It is important for child victims/survivors of violence, trafficking, sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, neglect, torture or any other form of cruel, inhuman, degrading treatment to undergo rehabilitation before being encouraged to reenter back into society.

13.5 The victims/survivors particularly from child trafficking, child sexual exploitation and child labour should receive some compensation from the proceeds of such crimes forfeited by the state, to support the victims/survivors<sup>246</sup>.

13.6 The relevant officials of the country of origin of the trafficked should be contacted as soon as possible to facilitate the reunion of the trafficked with his or her family. Whilst in transit, appropriate shelters and provisions for daily maintenance should be provided.

13.7 The Commission agrees with the Baseline Research findings and recommends appropriate law reform to ensure that the findings are addressed appropriately.

Recommendation 36: The proposed framework for the care and protection of children should provide a range of services to support the rehabilitation and psychological recovery of child victims/survivors of abuse and exploitation. These support services should include:

- short-term care, where appropriate<sup>247</sup>;
- medical care;
- psychological counselling;
- advice about their legal rights;
- education, employment and training opportunities; and
- protection for the victim/survivor and his/her family from intimidation and retaliation.

Recommendation 37: Rehabilitation services should:

- set relevant standards and guidelines;
- protect all child victims/survivors from involuntary detention and the harshness of the criminal prosecution processes;
- compensate child victims/survivors of crimes;
- protect the privacy and identity of child victims/survivors with appropriate sanctions;
- promote recovery and reintegration in families and communities (rather than institutional care); and
- seek the opinions of children to determine preferred recovery and reintegration processes.

14. Children in Conflict with the Law

14.1 Children in conflict with the law should be treated by the justice system in a manner consistent with their rights and their inherent dignity as human beings which takes into account their needs and targets their transformation. The administration of juvenile justice should be directed towards their rehabilitation and reintegration into society and not their punishment<sup>248</sup>.

14.2 The deprivation of a child's liberty should never be unlawful or arbitrary and should only be a measure of last resort and for the shortest appropriate period of time. Torture and other cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment should be prohibited<sup>249</sup>. Children have the right to be heard and to have their views taken seriously even under such circumstances<sup>250</sup>. When detained, every child should have contact with his or her family and access to prompt legal or other appropriate assistance.

14.3 Jail and detention should be a last resort for children in conflict with the law<sup>251</sup>. Juvenile justice should focus on reducing recourse to deprivation of liberty, through the promotion of non-custodial sanctions, restorative justice, and diversion<sup>252</sup>. Diversion is referring cases away from formal criminal justice proceedings towards community support to avoid the negative effects of being implicated in such proceedings. Diversionary measures can come into play at any stage - at the time of the arrest or immediately before the foreseen court hearing - either as a generally applicable procedure or on the decision of the police, prosecutor, court or an alternative adjudicative body<sup>253</sup>. Diversion may involve a restorative justice component<sup>254</sup>. The community, the victim and the offender must take active roles in order for justice to be truly restorative<sup>255</sup>.

14.4 In Samoa, a number of legislation deal with children in conflict with the law.

14.5 An arresting officer has a general obligation under the Criminal Procedure Act 1972 to produce an offender before a remanding officer<sup>256</sup>. The Police Powers Act 2007 allows police officers to use force and things that are necessary in the circumstances<sup>257</sup>. The Police Service Act 2009 also provides that a police officer may use reasonable force in exercising his or her powers as a police officer<sup>258</sup>.

14.6 In prison, the Prisons Regulations 1954 prohibit the use of violence on any prisoner except in self-defence, to prevent an escape and to preserve the peace<sup>259</sup>. The <sup>254</sup> Restorative justice is an approach that recognises how crime affects the victim, the community and the offender. Its primary focus is to repair the damage caused by the offence, to make reparation to the community and to the victim, and to return the offender to a productive place in the community. <sup>259</sup> Prisons Regulations 1954, reg. 61.

Regulations also allow the use of handcuffs and stout canvas dresses to restrain violent prisoners<sup>260</sup>. These provisions are applied in general but can be used to protect children who are in conflict with the law.

- 14.7 The Young Offenders Act 2007 on the other hand operates more specifically to provide a criminal justice system for young persons and their treatment by the courts. The Act applies to young persons who are offenders. A young person is a person of or over the age of 10 years and under the age of 17 years<sup>261</sup>. A person under the age of 10 years cannot be charged with any criminal offence<sup>262</sup>. This is because in the eyes of the law a person below the age of criminal liability cannot tell right from wrong.
- 14.8 The Young Offenders Act establishes a special division of the District Court called the “Youth Court” which is presided over by a District Court Judge. Criminal charges brought against a young person are laid in the Youth Court and the hearing of each charge is subject to the provisions of the Act<sup>263</sup>.
- 14.9 A young offender is entitled under the Young Offenders Act to have a parent or an adult member of his or her family present during investigation and throughout the trial proceedings<sup>264</sup>. The young offender is also entitled to apply for legal aid and receive independent legal advice<sup>265</sup>. This is in line with articles 6(3) and 9(4) of the Constitution which guarantees an arrested person the right to free legal assistance of his or her choosing where it is required by the interest of justice<sup>266</sup>.
- 14.10 The Young Offenders Act and Community Justice Act 2008 provide police, prosecutors and judges a broad discretion to resolve child cases through diversion<sup>267</sup>. Both Acts provide a wide range of alternative, community-based dispositions including probation; care, guidance and supervision orders; diversion to mental health treatment, counselling; victim/survivor reparation and restitution, community service work opportunities; education and vocational training, and living arrangement orders<sup>268</sup>.
- 14.11 The Young Offenders Act also provides that a young person remanded in custody, must be remanded to a residential youth facility, or if none exists, to a prison or place of residence as may be directed by the Court<sup>269</sup>. A young person who is remanded in custody held in prison must be kept separate from adult prisoners<sup>270</sup>. This is also the case if a young person is convicted of a crime and is liable to an imprisonment term. He or she must be separated from adult prisoners<sup>271</sup>.
- 14.12 The review of these legislation in the Baseline Research reveals that Samoa has not fully complied with 57% of all the relevant indicators<sup>272</sup>.

14.13 The Baseline Research compliments the strength of the laws protecting children in conflict and credits the Young Offenders Act 2007. However, the implementation of the Act requires further capacity building and support, particularly in relation to diversion, police warnings and cooperation between different actors in the justice sector, so that young offenders are able to fully benefit from the Act<sup>273</sup>. The Baseline Research also noted that there is still a need for law reform to address areas that the Young Offenders Act failed to address<sup>274</sup>.

14.14 In order for Samoa to fully comply with the set indicators, it needs to<sup>275</sup>:

- restrict the use of force or restraints against children;
- require the consent of the child and/or the child's parents for diversion procedures to be applied;
- explicitly limit the duration and use of pre-trial detention against children accused, used only as a measure of last resort and to put in place alternative measures for supervising such children pending trial;
- require that all children's cases are tried by a specialized court or a specially designated judge, separate from adult court proceedings. All court proceedings involving offenders under 18 required to occur in a closed court;
- strictly prohibit the publication of the name or any information leading to the identification of a child offender;
- require that children's cases are expedited;
- require that any penalties imposed are based on the best interests of the child and aimed at rehabilitation rather than punishment, with an explicit emphasis in drug and substance offences;
- separate children from adults in all places of detention, including police custody, pre-trial detention centres and prisons;
- explicitly provide for the right to family contact, visitors and correspondence while imprisoned with restrictions to these rights limited only in exceptional circumstances;
- regulate disciplinary procedures within detention centres and to specifically prohibit:
  - corporal punishment; solitary confinement; placement in a dark cell; reduction of diet; and
  - denial of contact with family members; and any other punishment that may compromise the physical or mental health of the child concerned.
- require that children deprived of liberty be subject to a periodic review of their situation;
- require that police, prosecutors, courts and prison officials have specialised units, or designated specialists, to handle children in conflict with the law;

- give all children in conflict with the law access to effective complaints procedures concerning all aspects of their treatment;
- require mechanisms to be put in place to monitor the treatment of children in conflict with the law, and to appropriately sanction justice sector officials who violate children's rights;
- require all processes defined in legislation to have the best interests of the child (including the maximum development of the child) specified as the primary consideration;
- make special procedures and protections for children who are in conflict with the law available to all children under the age of 18;
- require the police to notify legal assistance immediately upon the arrest of a child and legal assistance is entitled to be present during all investigative and trial proceedings, in accordance with the views of the child;
- require the police to have parents, legal guardians and/or a defence lawyer present whenever questioning a child;
- separate children detained pre trial from convicted children;
- give children explicit right of access to education and training suited to child's needs and abilities;
- require that while in detention children receive care, protection and all necessary individual assistance – social, educational, vocational, psychological, medical and physical – that they may require in view of their age, sex and personality, in the interests of their wholesome development;
- provide for the establishment of an effective system for inspection and monitoring of all institutions in which children may be deprived of their liberty;
- explicitly apply the Standard Minimum Rules for prisoners to children in detention, with regulations addressing at least the following:
  - Register; Hygiene; Clothing and bedding; Food; Exercise & sport; Medical services; Discipline and punishment; Instruments of restraint; Complaints; Contact; Books; Religion; Prisoner property; Death, illness, transfer; Institutional personnel; Privileges systems; Work; and Education and recreation.
- designate an authority to put in place programmes to assist children who are released from detention and to provide support for their reintegration into the community;
- require that the needs of disabled children are catered for at all stages of the legal process;
- require all justice sector officials, including police, prosecutors, judges, lawyers and prison officials to receive training and sensitization on children in contact with the law as part of their induction training<sup>276</sup> as well as on an in-service basis; and

- require the recording and reporting of systematic disaggregated data by all institutions dealing with child offenders.

Commission's views

14.15 It is important to note that there is a need to differentiate between children in conflict with the law and children in need of protection. Child victims of a crime are sometimes subjected to pre-trial detention in closed facilities or adult prisons, to safeguard their evidence or to obtain information from them<sup>277</sup>. In such cases, the child victim, who may be in need of special care and protection, suffers twice: first in the hands of the perpetrator and then in detention<sup>278</sup>.

14.16 The new Prisons and Corrections Bill 2011 makes provisions for young prisoners who are prisoners aged 18 years or younger<sup>279</sup>. It provides special procedures for young prisoners once they are admitted<sup>280</sup>. Young prisoners are classified according to set criteria to determine how they are to be separated to achieve their effective rehabilitation<sup>281</sup>. These procedures also provide for the allocation of prison labour in accordance with the age of the young prisoner; release and pre release programs to comply with CRC; and ensure that the right to education of a young prisoner is protected. The Bill boasts a system for inspection and monitoring of the prisons<sup>282</sup>.

14.17 The Prisons and Corrections Bill will provide an accessible complaint mechanism for prisoners and support after their release<sup>283</sup>. The guiding principles of the Prisons and Corrections Bill during interpretation and application of any of its provisions includes to the fullest extent possible the rights and obligations of CEDAW and CRC in the administration of Samoa's prisons and the treatment of prisoners. It also applies the Standard Minimum Rules. Standard Minimum Rules were adopted by the First United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders to set out what is generally accepted as being good principle and practice in the treatment of prisoners and the management of prison institutions.<sup>284</sup> This means the prohibition of corporal punishment, solitary confinement, placement in a dark cell, reduction of diet, denial of contact with family members and any other punishment that may compromise the physical and mental health of a young prisoner.

Recommendation 38: The Young Offenders Act needs to be amended to:

- change the ages of children in which the Act applies from between 10 years and 17 years to between 10 years and 18 years;
- require the consent of the child and/or the child's parents for diversion procedures to be applied;
- require that pre-trial detention be used only as a measure of last resort and to put in place alternative measures for supervising an accused child pending trial;

- explicitly limit the duration and use of pre-trial detention against an accused child;

- require that children deprived of liberty be subject to a periodic review of their situation;
- require that police, prosecutors, courts and prison officials have specialised units, or designated specialists, to handle children in conflict with the law;
- require all processes defined in the above legislation to have the best interests of the child (including the maximum development of the child) specified as the primary consideration;
- require the police to notify legal assistance immediately upon the arrest of a child and legal assistance is entitled to be present during all investigative and trial proceedings, in accordance with the views of the child;
- require that the needs of disabled children are catered for at all stages of the legal process;

- require the recording and reporting of systematic disaggregated data by all institutions dealing with child offenders.

15. Information Access

15.1 Information access empowers individuals and advances development. A society where information is freely accessible empowers its people and supports participatory democracy. Thus, when information access is hindered whether for political or technological reasons, a society's capacity to function is stunted<sup>286</sup>.

15.2 Whilst access to information is primordial to the exercise of the basic human right of freedom of expression, freedom of expression is not absolute. Therefore, where information access is detrimental to the lives of children, any controls and perhaps prohibitions are justifiable<sup>287</sup>.

15.3 The Films Control Act 1978 establishes the Film Control Board whose function is to regulate and control the public exhibition of films and their censorship<sup>288</sup>. The Board is responsible for issuing licences to each exhibitor such as broadcast, cable or satellite television service providers; picture theatres; educational institutions; internet or other computer based suppliers; and other classes of exhibitors determined by the Board<sup>289</sup>.

15.4 The principal censor is responsible with the censoring of films and advertisements. The Board however determines the policy to be adopted in the exercise of the powers of the principal censor.

15.5 A film cannot be released for a public exhibition or renting without the approval of the principal censor<sup>290</sup>. The principal censor's approval shall not be given if a film or advertisement is in his or her opinion:

- “... (a) Describes, depicts, or otherwise deals with-
- (i) acts of torture, the infliction of serious physical harm, acts of significant cruelty or extreme violence;
  - (ii) sexual violence or sexual coercion, or violence or coercion in association with sexual conduct;
  - (iii) other sexual or physical conduct of a degrading or dehumanizing or demeaning nature;
  - (iv) sexual conduct with or by children, or young persons, or both; or
  - (v) physical conduct in which sexual satisfaction is derived from inflicting or suffering cruelty or pain;
- (b) Exploits the nudity of children, or young persons, or both;
- (c) Degrades or dehumanizes or demeans any person;
- (d) Promotes or encourages criminal acts or acts of terrorism;
- (e) Represents (whether directly or by implication) that members of any particular class of the public are inherently inferior to other members of the public by reason of any characteristics that is a prohibited ground of discrimination specified under the Constitution of the Independent State of Samoa; and
- (f) Any matter which is contrary to public order or undesirable in the public interest.”<sup>291</sup>

15.6 In approving films for public exhibition, the principal censor shall classify them in certain categories:

- Approved for general exhibition; or
- Approved for exhibition to a specified class or description of persons only (being persons of or over the age of 5 years), or for specified purposes only, or on one or more specified occasions only.

15.7 A person who fails to comply with the provisions of the Act is liable upon conviction to a fine not exceeding 20 penalty units for individuals and 50 penalty units for a company. In addition to such fines the Court may order that any film or advertisement in respect of which such offence was committed be confiscated and disposed of in such manner as the Court may direct<sup>292</sup>.

15.8 The legislative review under the Baseline Research reveals that Samoa has not fully complied with any of the relevant indicators<sup>293</sup>. The Baseline Research stated that the

<sup>291</sup> Ibid, s. 18.

current protection of children from exposure to inappropriate and damaging material applies only in relation to films and is therefore very limited, particularly given children's increasing access to other forms of information and communication technologies including the internet.

15.9 In order for Samoa to fully comply with indicators, it needs to:

- ensure that the Censorship board or equivalent body has jurisdiction over all media – print, electronic and audio/visual;
- require that pubertal change and sex education be included in school curricula;
- require that legal rights and human rights education be included in school curricula; and
- remove discriminatory provisions from access to information laws.

Commission's views

15.10 The Commission believes that information access is necessary in order for a child to fully enjoy his or her human rights. Communication therefore is a vital piece of the puzzle.

15.11 The discussions in the Oceania Deaf and Disability Forum in November 2011 revealed that Sāmoa is working towards developing a national sign language<sup>294</sup>. This is important for children with physical disabilities (deaf and mute) so they can fully enjoy their human rights. The work on CRC should embrace the work on children with disabilities. The Commission however believes that a better and more a coordinated support will be made through the work on the Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities (CRPD)<sup>295</sup>.

15.12 The Commission also believes that the right to access information also comes with the responsibility to ensure that such access is not detrimental to the welfare of children. Children accessing internet unsupervised should not be permissible as this can expose them to problems such as cyber bullying<sup>296</sup>, cyber stalking<sup>297</sup>, exposure to pornography, grooming<sup>298</sup>, identity theft and other harmful activities<sup>299</sup>. There should be a proper policy, standards and relevant legislative protection for children on cyber/internet safety.

<sup>296</sup> Cyber bullying is when one person or a group of people try to threaten or embarrass someone else using a mobile phone or the internet. Cyber bullying is just as harmful as physical bullying.

<sup>297</sup> This is often performed in public forums, social media or online information sites where a person uses available information to threaten a victim's earnings, employment, reputation, or safety.

15.13 The Crimes Bill criminalises computer related activities such as accessing computer system for dishonest purpose<sup>300</sup>; damaging or interfering with computer system<sup>301</sup>; making, selling, or distributing or possessing software for committing crime<sup>302</sup>; and accessing computer system without authorisation<sup>303</sup>. It also criminalises harassment utilising means of electronic communication.

15.14 The Films Control Act 1978 needs to be effectively enforced. Indecent programmes are still filtering through public television and censoring of some movies are too low<sup>304</sup>. The Commission feels that the Censorship Board's jurisdiction should be extended to censor and classify other types of materials such as computer games, television programs, cartoons, magazines, books and other types of electronic materials.

15.15 In relation to the issue of including pubertal change and sex education in the school curricula, the Commission believes that this should be introduced at the appropriate level of education and age. There is a concern that if these are introduced at an inappropriate level then it might cause more harm than good. However, there is no better place to discuss such issues than in the home. Parents should be encouraged to share such knowledge, fathers to their sons and mothers to their daughters.

15.16 The Commission agrees with the introduction of legal rights and human rights education into school curricula but this should be done at an age where children can understand.

Recommendation 39: The NCCRC and CRCP should provide the necessary support for the development of the national sign language by MESC and relevant partners. The NCCRC and CRCP should continue its support for the work on children with disabilities. This support will diminish accordingly as the work on the Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities (CRPD)<sup>305</sup> escalates. A wide-ranging support will be received from international partners for children with disabilities once Sāmoa ratifies the Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities (CRPD)<sup>306</sup>.

Recommendation 40: The Films Control Act 1978 needs to be effectively enforced.

Recommendation 41: The Censorship Board's jurisdiction needs to be extended to allow them to censor and classify other types of materials such as computer games, television programs, cartoons, magazines, news paper articles, books and other types of electronic materials. They should also be able to receive and determine complaints on breaches of censoring standards or protocol.

Recommendation 42: Proper guidelines and policies should be formulated to guide regulatory work on information access by children.

16. Birth Registration

- 16.1 Birth registration is fundamental to the protection of a child's human rights<sup>307</sup>. It gives the child a legal existence, identity and it is the sign that he or she belongs to a family, a community and a nation<sup>308</sup>. It shows that a child has a place, and a stake, in all three.
- 16.2 A child who is not registered does not have a nationality. A child without a nationality is deemed stateless. Stateless children are not considered as nationals by any state under the operations of its laws<sup>309</sup>. This means they do not enjoy any social, economic, civil and political rights. They cannot access benefits available under national schemes such as free/subsidized education and free/subsidized medical treatment. In states where social welfare services are available, an unregistered child cannot have access to funds disseminated under social welfare schemes.
- 16.3 In Samoa, the Registrar of Births, Deaths and Marriages has a statutory duty to establish a Register and record all births, deaths and marriages<sup>310</sup>. All births including still-births<sup>311</sup> are registered under the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act 2002<sup>312</sup>.
- 16.4 A birth cannot be registered if the details of the parents are incomplete or incorrect and/or where a child has no name or is given a name that is prohibited<sup>313</sup>. Prohibited names are names that in the Registrar's opinion, will cause offence to a reasonable person, is unreasonably long or resembles a matai title or other official title or rank<sup>314</sup>. The confidentiality of the information in the Register is guaranteed under the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act 2002<sup>315</sup>.
- 16.5 The Baseline Research reveals that the relevant legislation dealing with birth registration in Samoa has not fully complied with 50% of the relevant indicators<sup>316</sup>.
- 16.6 In order for Samoa to full comply with all of the indicators it needs to remove discriminatory provisions in the birth registration laws.

Commission's views

- 16.7 The Commission found no discriminatory provisions within the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act 2002. Thus it disagrees with the Baseline Research findings under this category. The Commission believes that the Births, Deaths and Marriages

<sup>307</sup> http://www.childinfo.org/files/birthregistration\_Digestenglish.pdf (Access 04 May 2012)

<sup>308</sup> The World Health Organization defines a live birth as a baby that breathes or shows any other sign of life after delivery, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy. The UN view is that all babies born alive should be registered and their existence recognized, whatever their gestational age and regardless of whether they are still alive at the time of registration.

Registration Act 2002 fully complies with all the relevant indicators under this part. It has satisfied all the relevant CRC indicators under this category.

16.8 It is also important to note that just as birth registration is important, child death registration is equally important as well. The data on numbers of child deaths and causes of child death are essential in determining national priorities and to formulate and monitor policies, for public health care as well other government policy that may be based on such data<sup>317</sup>. There should be emphasis on child death registration as well in Sāmoa.

17. Final Comments

17.1 The Commission when undertaking this work believes that all children have the right to be safe and to receive loving care and support. They have a right to receive the facilities and services that they need to enable them to succeed in life.

17.2 All parents including single parents have the primary responsibility of nurturing their children, and ensuring that their rights are protected.

17.3 The Commission recognizes that the best way to protect children is to take a proactive approach. In order to do this, we need to build capacity and strength in our families and communities and across our nation.

17.4 The Commission is aware that vast majority of Samoan parents have the capacity to raise happy and healthy children. But some families need help hence they may require the support and guidance of their relatives, communities and the state. In some extreme cases, statutory intervention may be necessary.

17.5 The Commission also identified that investment by governments and the non-government sectors into family support and child protection services are significant but isolated hence such efforts require better coordination in order for children to reap maximum benefits.

17.6 Samoa requires a unified approach which recognises that protection of children is not simply a matter of concern for Government and its national and international partners but a responsibility for all.

List of Recommendations

Recommendation 1: A new principal legislation (Child care and protection legislation) should be drafted to replace the Infants Ordinance and consolidate all appropriate child care and protection provisions currently accommodated in different pieces of specific legislation. The new principal legislation should address the issues raised in the Baseline Research. It should also accommodate the proposed child care and protection framework.

All consequential amendments to be made to specific legislation listed in Footnote 17 of this Report should be undertaken by the Drafting Division of the Attorney Generals Office during its annual legislative revision and consolidation programme.

Recommendation 2: Corporal punishment in homes should be addressed through awareness programmes and trainings by the MWCSO and its partners, at the village level, focussing on the effects of corporal punishment on the development of children. These trainings should also provide alternative methods of discipline. This should be done before Samoa legislates against corporal punishment in homes.

Recommendation 3: The Ministry of Education, Sports and Culture should explore the option of including private schools under the scope of the Education Act 2009.

Recommendation 4: The Ministry of Education Sports and Culture must develop a national discipline policy applicable to all private and public schools in Samoa.

Recommendation 5: This issue of long absence of parents from homes, frequency of such absence and the link to cases of incest and sexual assault should be emphasised in awareness programmes by the MWCSO and its partners.

Recommendation 6: The definition of “child” in all domestic legislation should be made consistent with the definition in the CRC. A child is “every human being below the age of eighteen years unless under the law applicable to the child, majority is attained earlier”.

Recommendation 7: The age of majority should be reduced to eighteen years. This will be consistent with the definition of child in the CRC. It will also be consistent with the definition of adult in section 2 of the Young Offenders Act 2007.

Recommendation 8: All domestic legislation should refrain from using different terms such as infant<sup>318</sup> and young person<sup>319</sup> to refer to different age groups. All legislation should use the term “child” throughout all legislation. These terms however, can still be used if they are properly defined as referring to a child of a certain age group.

Recommendation 9: The minimum age of marriage in Sāmoa should be amended to eighteen years for both males and females. There is no real justification as to why the minimum age of marriage for females should be lower than males. It is discriminatory. It is contrary to Article 15(4) of the Constitution which provides for the equal protection of all persons under the law. Section 9 of the Marriage Ordinance 1961 should be amended to make minimum age of marriage eighteen years (18) for both males and females. Parental consent should be sought for marriages below the age of 18 years and section 10 of the Marriage Ordinance 1961 should be amended accordingly.

Recommendation 10: It should also be clearly expressed in the new Child Care and Protection Legislation that the concept of emancipation does not apply to Samoa. This will ensure that female minors giving birth below the age of eighteen (18) years will still enjoy their rights as a child and not lose them due to child birth.

Recommendation 11: Children removed from the care of their parents should have the first option of being placed in the care and protection of members of their extended family under the new legal framework.

Recommendation 12: There should be a second option for shelters in the case that the placement with the member(s) of extended family fails or is unfavourable at the first instance. It is recommended that the provision of shelters by Non-Governmental Organisations are explored to determine if they can be utilised and if possible how such efforts can be complemented.

Recommendation 13: Proper guidelines and standards should be created to ensure that any new environment that a child is to be placed in is safe and healthy for the child's physical, mental and spiritual development.

Recommendation 14: The MWCSO should be responsible for carrying out an initial assessment of a relative's home that a child is going to be placed in to identify any necessary improvements to be made to ensure that the new environment is safe and healthy for the child's physical, mental and spiritual development. In the case of emergencies then a child must be placed in a safe place whilst such assessments are being carried out.

Recommendation 15: The Government should determine how it can complement or subsidise both options for shelter. It should also look at how it can assist with the costs of necessary improvements to a relative's home.

Recommendation 16: A new comprehensive framework must be established to effectively and properly regulate child welfare and child protection services in Samoa through the new Child Care and Protection Legislation based on the CRC standards.

Recommendation 17: The features of the new framework should reflect the concerns identified in the Baseline Research. These concerns should be addressed in light of the local context, (such as Samoan culture and traditions, available resources and the existing framework under the Infants Ordinance).

Recommendation 18: The reporting of cases of children suffering violence, abuse, neglect or exploitation to relevant authorities (including children suspected or at risk) should be made only on a voluntary basis at this stage. Samoa has to put in place a functioning and confidential child care and protection framework first before considering the issue on reporting.

Recommendation 19: The issues identified in Baseline Research under the Family Separation and Alternative Care category should be all addressed in the new Child Care and Protection Legislation.

The consequential amendments can be made through the legislative review process by the Legal Drafting Division of the Attorney General's Office.

Recommendation 20: In relation to alternative care, the Commission has already made recommendations earlier with regards to using the extended family as an option and the use of existing efforts by non-governmental organisations. Guidance can be sought from the framework provided under the Mental Health Act 2007, where voluntary care and support within family and community is first used before considering the use of a formal institution.

Recommendation 21: The new Care and Protection Legislation should address the issues raised in paragraph 7.5 of this Report.

Recommendation 22: The new Care and Protection Legislation should:

- clearly define and strictly prohibit all forms of violence against children<sup>320</sup>;
- prohibit all expressions of violence in schools, whether by pupils or teachers, including physical violence, emotional violence (bullying), sexual harassment, stigma and discrimination;
- identify and prohibit traditional practices<sup>321</sup> harmful to children and prescribe appropriate penalties for those who violate these provisions; and
- call for institutions dealing with reports of violence against children to record and report disaggregated data in relation to reports received and actions taken.

Recommendation 23: In light of the recent reforms, Samoa's criminal laws still need to:

- create a separate and specific criminal offence(s) for prostituting children, defined in accordance with the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of a Child and sanctioned in a manner that reflects the gravity of the crime;
- properly define unlawful sexual activity involving children;
- call for institutions dealing with reports of sexual abuse and exploitation of children to record and report disaggregated data in relation to reports received and actions taken.

Recommendation 24: Samoa also needs to accede to and promote bilateral and multilateral measures to protect the child from sexual abuse and sexual exploitation. This will guarantee the effective enforcement of the extraterritorial application of its criminal laws under the new Bill through international cooperation.

Recommendation 25: In light of the recent criminal law reviews, Samoa still needs to:

- include a specific crime relating to the sale of children, defined broadly in accordance with the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of a Child and sanctioned in a manner that reflects the gravity of the crime;
- permit the use of testimony of foreign trafficked victims/survivors taken before repatriation, for example, through the use of video and audio tapes of the trafficked victims/survivors' testimony as evidence<sup>322</sup>; and

<sup>322</sup> This is being addressed in the new Criminal Procedure Bill 2012 which is still in draft form.

- impose civil or criminal liability on legal entities<sup>323</sup> for trafficking offences.

Recommendation 26: The proposed legal framework for child care and protection should:

- designate a central authority (depending on available resources or designate an existing one) to deal with issues of international child abductions;
- have procedures and guidelines for immediate and safe emergency care for children who have been rescued from trafficking;
- ensure the effective communication of court orders to border officials;
- empower state institutions to release information that will help to trace the whereabouts of abducted children;
- promote cooperation between relevant agencies, in particular the police, immigration and welfare services, in identifying child victims/survivors of trafficking; and
- provide protection, rehabilitation and support services to all child victims/survivors of trafficking regardless of nationality and agreement to appear as witnesses in any criminal proceedings.

Recommendation 27: Samoa's immigration laws should:

- permit foreign trafficked children to remain in the country, temporarily or permanently, in appropriate cases, and in accordance with the stated views of the child;
- have guidelines for border officials for the identification and handling of child victims/survivors of trafficking;
- secure the prompt return of children wrongfully removed to or retained in the Samoa and to ensure that rights of custody and access under the law of other countries are effectively respected; and
- have guidelines for the safe and timely return and repatriation of child victims/survivors of cross-border trafficking where appropriate.

Recommendation 28: Amend the relevant provision of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2007 to allow the use of proceeds or part of the proceeds of trafficking forfeited, to be used to support trafficking victims/survivors.

Recommendation 29: The Labour and Employment Act 1972 and/or Labour and Employment Relations Bill 2011 should be amended to require employers to have and be ready to produce on demand proof of age of all children working for them.

Recommendation 30: The Crimes Ordinance should be amended to explicitly prohibit the use of children for all forms of research, including medical or scientific experimentation, unless appropriate consents have been obtained from the child and/or parents or legal guardians.

Recommendation 31: An independent child-friendly national forum should be established to hear complaints, investigate, consider and resolve complaints regarding breaches of children's labour rights through the Ministry of Commerce Industry and Labour (MCIL).

Recommendation 32: A national strategy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labour in Samoa should be established if nothing has been established to date by the MCIL.

Recommendation 33: The Education Act 2009 should be amended to prohibit children below the age of 10 years from selling goods on the street at any time.

Recommendation 34: The Education Act 2009 should be amended to provide that any child over the age of 10 years who sells goods on the street should be prohibited from selling such goods after 7 p.m. everyday.

Recommendation 35: In order for national investigative and court procedures to be child friendly and protect the rights and interests of children at all stages of the justice process they need to:

- have comprehensive inter-agency referral procedures to promote coordination between police, health care workers, social workers and other service providers;
- have specialised units (in police, prosecutors and courts) designated to handle cases involving child victims, survivors or witnesses;
- specialised units should undergo special training for police, prosecutors, lawyers and judges in dealing with cases where children are victims/survivors;
- take the best interests of the child into consideration in every matter that concerns them;
- take into account the child's views in accordance with their age;
- adopt child-friendly interview environments and interview techniques<sup>324</sup>;
- control the number and length of interviews child victims/survivors are subjected to;
- provide support at all stages of the process, including social and legal counselling and allow the victim/survivor or witness to become familiar with the court process;
- give investigations and trials of cases involving child witnesses priority so that they are conducted expediently;
- adopt measures to prevent intimidation and retaliation towards a child victim/survivor and their family such as safe shelter (emergency and longer-term), relocation, and prohibition on the disclosure of information concerning the victim/survivor's identity.

<sup>324</sup> Employed by people such as police officers, prosecutors, judges and social workers.

Recommendation 36: The proposed framework for the care and protection of children should provide a range of services to support the rehabilitation and psychological recovery of child victims/survivors of abuse and exploitation. These support services should include:

- short-term care, where appropriate<sup>325</sup>;
- medical care;
- psychological counselling;
- advice about their legal rights;
- education, employment and training opportunities; and
- protection for the victim/survivor and his/her family from intimidation and retaliation.

Recommendation 37: Rehabilitation services should:

- set relevant standards and guidelines;
- protect all child victims/survivors from involuntary detention and the harshness of the criminal prosecution processes;
- compensate child victims/survivors of crimes;
- protect the privacy and identity of child victims/survivors with appropriate sanctions;
- promote recovery and reintegration in families and communities (rather than institutional care); and
- seek the opinions of children to determine preferred recovery and reintegration processes.

Recommendation 38: The Young Offenders Act needs to be amended to:

- change the ages of children in which the Act applies from between 10 years and 17 years to between 10 years and 18 years;
- require the consent of the child and/or the child's parents for diversion procedures to be applied;
- require that pre-trial detention be used only as a measure of last resort and to put in place alternative measures for supervising an accused child pending trial;
- explicitly limit the duration and use of pre-trial detention against an accused child;
- require that cases involving young children be expedited;
- require that children deprived of liberty be subject to a periodic review of their situation;
- require that police, prosecutors, courts and prison officials have specialised units, or designated specialists, to handle children in conflict with the law;

<sup>325</sup> For example, by foster families and shelters.

- require all processes defined in the above legislation to have the best interests of the child (including the maximum development of the child) specified as the primary consideration;
- require the police to notify legal assistance immediately upon the arrest of a child and legal assistance is entitled to be present during all investigative and trial proceedings, in accordance with the views of the child;
- require that the needs of disabled children are catered for at all stages of the legal process;
- require all justice sector officials, including police, prosecutors, judges, lawyers and prison officials to receive training and sensitization on children in contact with the law as part of their induction training<sup>326</sup> as well as on an in-service basis; and
- require the recording and reporting of systematic disaggregated data by all institutions dealing with child offenders.

Recommendation 39: The NCCRC and CRCP should provide the necessary support for the development of the national sign language by MESC and relevant partners. The NCCRC and CRCP should continue its support for the work on children with disabilities. This support will diminish accordingly as the work on the Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities (CRPD)<sup>327</sup> escalates. A wide-ranging support will be received from international partners for children with disabilities once Sāmoa ratifies the Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities (CRPD)<sup>328</sup>.

Recommendation 40: The Films Control Act 1978 needs to be effectively enforced.

Recommendation 41: The Censorship Board’s jurisdiction needs to be extended to allow them to censor and classify other types of materials such as computer games, television programs, cartoons, magazines, news paper articles, books and other types of electronic materials. They should also be able to receive and determine complaints on breaches of censoring standards or protocol.

Recommendation 42: Proper guidelines and policies should be formulated to guide regulatory work on information access by children.
